3 KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Today

Poison for Prisoners
One Lady Helps Another
Mistakes Well Meant
One Short Lynching

By Arthur Brisbane

A NEW IDEA for capital punishment, suggested by the Very Rev. Dean Inge of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, commonly called "The Gloomy Dean," and indorsed by George Bernard Shaw, is this:

"Don't kill your criminals. Sentence them to death. Lock them up, leave painless poison where they can get it, and let them swallow it when ready."

It reminds you of Dickens' nurse who said, concerning whiskey:

"Don't ask me will I take none, but leave it on the mantelpiece and let me put my lips to it, when so disposed."

The criminals might not be "disposed" for a long time, if ever.

But regardless of what the criminals would like, you couldn't pass such a law in this country. Both Protestant and Catholic religions forbid suicide, and where Protestants and Catholics agree lawmakers will also agree.

Mr. Shaw would compel the doomed to decide. He would say to the murderer:

"For two or three days we shall supply you with poison to kill yourself, painlessly. If you are not dead by such date we shall hang you."

That would make the condemned's last days more complicated than usual, listening to Carlyle's "Hammering on the Gallows," and looking dubiously at the poison.

In the Washington Herald, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of that Hearst newspaper, publishes over her signature a first-class editorial advocating the election of Mrs. Ruth McCormick, who will run for the United States Senate in Illinois this fall. The Chicago Herald Examiner reprints the editorial today.

Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Patterson have been friends since childhood, and the editorial undoubtedly will add to the size of the McCormick vote.

Mrs. Patterson, born in Illinois, is the granddaughter of Joseph Medill, who established the Chicago Tribune, and Mrs. McCormick is the daughter of the late Mark Hanna.

Serious mistakes are made with good intentions. Prohibition, that had virtue, innumerable good impulses back of it, produced bootlegging. Bootlegging has organized crime, with hundreds of millions yearly income, and crime blossoms out in unexpected forms.

Investigation of "tong" murders, in New York's Chinese quarter, shows that certain Chinese have entered the "racketeer" game, so important in our modern civilization.

The crime system is spreading and will spread, while young men otherwise worthless, deadened by cocaine, can earn $500 by pulling a trigger.

There is a letter from a police captain asking for the loan of "4 C's," meaning $400. He got the loan, but never paid it. There is a check drawn to the order of a state senator, whose name is made public.

Oliver Moore, a Negro, 29, was accused of attacking two white girls. The sheriff jailed him, a mob broke into the prison. "Moore walked sullenly down the aisle toward them."

They took him to his home, that the "lesson might be impressed on his neighbors," hanged him to a tree, riddled his body with bullets.

Men in the North will pass judgment on that incident promptly. Some might modify the judgment if they happened to be the father of girls, five and seven years old, similarly treated.

One ray of hope in China, first in some time. Farmers that were starving are making a living raising dogs for their fur.

Five years ago, when the fashion started, dog skins had a value for western barbarian fur dealers of $1.50 each. In many cases in addition, because of religious scruples, the dog owner would not kill the dog, but sold it alive, and let somebody else kill it. But now a good skin is worth $15. On that sum a Chinese can live for three or four months.

When Gutenberg ran his little press by hand, using the typesetting idea that was to fight the darkness of superstition with light, he printed a simple

Mayor Russell Lauds Order for Move; Knights Honor the Cardinal on "Boston Day"

A call on every fraternal organization in the country to join with the Knights of Columbus in a campaign against slander in politics was made today by Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge at a Cambridge luncheon to delegates to the 48th supreme convention of the order.

The delegates, on a historic tour of Cambridge as a part of "Boston Day," were guests of Cambridge and of Cambridge Council No. 74 at the Hotel Commander, Cambridge.

"I say to you, gentlemen," declared Mayor Russell at the luncheon, "that the Masons, the Elks and other organizations should fall in line and work hand in hand with the Knights of Columbus to exterminate this abuse of the God-given right to serve in public office without subjecting one's self to be the victim of a slanderous tongue.

"Silence and contempt seem no longer to be the way to combat this modern method of blackening the character of a man who spires to public office.

PLEDGES HIS AID

"It must be met some other way, and I say that the Knights of Columbus, targets themselves in the past, will do it.

"This movement will have the hearty support of fair-minded citizens, and I for one, pledge myself to aid in every way, actively and otherwise, and say to the world that a man may run for public office without being subjected to the deadly poison weapon of slander."

When the Knights, riding in a

That was the only statement Chief Herman A. Haskell would make as County Atty. Ralph M. Ingalls assumed complete charge of the inquiry and ordered that no information be made public.

IN MARLOW CASE

Wilson, whose right name is John Panica, has been a well known figure in Boston and New York sporting circles since his retirement from the ring and he was the central figure in the investigation of Frankie Marlow's murder in New York a year ago.

He was said to have been dining with Marlow, his fight manager, when Marlow received a telephone call that lured him to his death.

Search for members of a rum racketeering gang believed to have slain Connolly, possibly in mistake for Patrolman Arthur "Tex" White, nemesis of rum runners, was extended throughout the state on orders of Prosecutor Ingalls.

QUIT GARRETT HUNT

Links Slot Machines to Revere 'Graft'

Thirty slot machines, filled with coins and stored in Revere Veterans' Hall prior to the fatal gun battle waged by warring gangs last Friday, disappeared mysteriously after police were called to the scene of the shooting.

The story of the vanishing machines was revealed today by John Malcolm Macauley of the city of Revere law department, who has had frequent skirmishes with "big shot" gamblers in the city.

How the machines came to be stored in the hall instead of their usual resting place in a beach hotel was explained by Macauley, but their ultimate destination remains a mystery to the police and Macauley himself.

PROBED RACKETS

Macauley has achieved considerable local fame as an investigator of organized crime in the city, and for years has been a thorn in the sides of persons who have established themselves in the gambling racket.

The machines were set up at a carnival staged in a vacant lot near the Veterans' Hall last Friday evening, according to Macauley, and were functioning smoothly until Chief of Police Edward J. Tighe came on the scene.

The players, with handfuls of nickels and quarters, were dispersed and those in charge of the carnival were ordered to remove the machines.

"One of Revere's political office holders owned the machines", said Macauley, "and he promptly took charge and ordered them carried into Veterans' Hall. There were about 30 machines there, many of them loaded with coin.

MACHINES DISAPPEAR

"Whether the gangsters involved in the shooting got busy on the contents and quarreled about the 'divvy' is a matter of conjecture. At any rate the machines were there when the shooting began.

"It wasn't long after the bar-

BRIDE AND 2 MEN DIE IN HONEYMOON WRECK

Auto Hits Tree and Rebounds 50 Feet at North Andover; Harvard Man a Victim

Andover, Aug. 20—Two men and the bride of one were killed today in North Andover when their new sedan, traveling at terrific speed, whined off the cement road at Andover and Peters sts., crashed into an elm tree and then rebounded back to the road.

A few minutes before he died in Lawrence General Hospital, one of the victims said he was Edwin G. Nash of Shepard st., Cambridge, an instructor at Harvard. Officials of the University declared, however, that Nash was a Carnegie student at Harvard in 1926 and 1927.

The other victims are believed to have been Paul G. Plummer of Melrose and San Domingo and his bride of a month, Mrs. Leone Plummer, 23. Plummer was the son of Mrs. Gula Plummer of 330 West Emerson st., Melrose, owner of the new sedan in which the bridal couple had been honeymooning.

CAR HURLED 50 FEET

The accident occurred at the intersection known as Farnham's Corner, in front of the home of John J. Burke. Because of the heavy bank on the highway which makes the turn easy and minimizes the danger of skidding, police said today they believed the car was traveling at high speed.

The Burke family were awakened by the sound of the crash as the heavy sedan hit the elm tree sideways, 50 feet off the road in a field, then rebounded, to come to rest in its side on the cement pavement.

The mangled bodies of the woman and the man believed to have been her husband were found in the street car tracks on the opposite side of the road.

WED MONTH AGO

Police, in going through the car wreckage, found the automobile registration, made out in the name of Mrs. Gula Plummer, and at first it was believed that she was the woman victim.

Then it was learned she is at the Plummer summer home in New London, N. H., and that her son, superintendent of a sugar plantation in San Domingo, his bride and Nash started for New London early today in the car.

Plummer was 27 years old and a Dartmouth graduate. His bride of less than a month was Miss Leone Shepard of a town near Minneapolis, Minn.

Nash was 39 years old and a graduate of Williams College in the class of 1915. In 1926 and 1927 he was a Carnegie Fellow at Harvard on a traveling scholarship, which was the last record of him at Harvard.

Also greeting the visitors were Grand Knight William L. Nixon of the local council and a special officer in the Cambridge police department, and Atty. John P. Brennan, chairman of the Cambridge committee.

TO HONOR CARDINAL

The Cambridge luncheon was was one of the features of "Boston Day" in the convention, during which the delegates toured Boston and the North and South Shores by land and sea.

The city contributed $10,000 to the success of the convention, Mayor Curley announced to the body, stating it was due to the "splendid support" of former Atty.-Gen. Herbert Parker, general chairman of the Massachusetts Tercentenary Commission, that the convention was listed as one of the tercentenary events.

In the balloting today for supreme directors, Daniel A. Tobin of Brooklyn and William J. Guste of New Orleans were re-elected, while Francis Fauteaux of Montreal, Francis J. Heazel of Ashville, N. C., and James H. Carroll of Lewiston, Me., were elected.

Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody today presented a diamond ring and a certificate to State Deputy H. A. McNeill of Brandon, Manitoba, for maintaining the best jurisdiction.

To Grand Knight Alfred E. Mallette of Council No. 1917, Cochrane, Ontario, hte supreme knight presented a gold watch, a trip to the convention, a set of ceremonial robes and a certificate.

District Deputies William E. Schmich of Carroll, Ia., in charge of the eighth Iowa district, and Edward S. Barker of The Pas, Manitoba, were awarded watches, trip to convention and certificate.

DECORATE GRAVES

The invitation of Supreme Knight Carmody to Cardinal O'Connell to be present at the business sessions of the convention, has been accepted by Cardinal O'Connell, it was announced.

Graves of former Supreme Advocate Joseph C. Pellitier, former Supreme Director William C. Prout and former Supreme Director William S. McNary were to be decorated today by a special committee appointed for that purpose by Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody.

The motion to that effect which passed the convention body was sponsored by Supreme Director John F. O'Neill of New Jersey.

An auto tour in the morning and a "day on the bay" starting early in the afternoon and ending at midnight were the features from a social standpoint for today.

Historic places scheduled to be visited included Faneuil Hall, the birthplace of Paul Revere, the Old North Church, City Hall and the State House, with a special trip to the hall of flags.

In Cambridge stops were to be made at Harvard University, the Agassiz Museum for an inspection of the famous glass flowers and the Harvard University Botanical Garden. The party wer to be guests of Cambridge Council No. 74, at luncheon in the Hotel Commander.

Automobiles were to convey the members from Cambridge to Rowes wharf for a sail through Boston Harbor to the North and South Shores.

HISTORIC LECTURES

Lecturers were on board to explain the history of all points of interest. A shore dinner and dancing will be given tonight when the party disembarks. Those who stay in the city to attend the convention sessions will be taken to join the rest of the party after the sessions close.

Revival of the Lay Apostolate, which has flourished in the Roman Catholic Church since its early days, was started in the annual message of Supreme Knight Carmody to the convention.

It was explained by Supreme Knight Carmody in his message:

"It is a voluntary service by organized laymen under the authority and direction of the bishops and priests to extend the spiritual and moral teachings of the Church to the hearts of all men, and thereby bring directly into all social, civil, economic, moral and religious problems the principles and standards of true Catholic thought. Its underlying purpose is to bring into more perfect co-ordination and active cooperation all Catholic forces.

"It recognizes especially the strength and value of organizations and societies already formed and functioning for their own meritorious purposes, which without diminution of their respective programs or being otherwise affected may further expand and enrich their scope of action and field of service by the infusion of the apostolic spirit into their undertakings, aims and ideals.

"By it there is sought to awaken in individuals and organized bodies a fuller realization of their powers and responsibilities to accomplish the spiritual mission of the church by helping bishops and priests in their apostolic work of the care of souls."

REPORT ON ACTIVITIES

Carmody's lengthy message made a complete report of the work of the order.

He also asked the order to do all that it could toward relieving suffering from drouth in areas affected.

Report of Dr. Edward W. Fahey, supreme physician, showed 1997 insurance members died in the year ending last December. The death rate was 79 for every 10,000 members. Actual mortality exceeded the number of the previous year by 97.

A total of 35,572 new members were admitted to the order during the year ending June 30, according to the report of William J. McGinley. Thirteen new councils were added to the order.

Other statistics reported were: Insurance membership gained 148,513 and associate membership 220,577.

COLUMBUS MEMORIAL

Six hundred and twenty-five thousand members in 2555 councils in the United States, Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico, Philippine Islands, Newfoundland, Panama and Alaska.

Insurance claims totalling more than $2,000,000 were paid out last year. Total insurance in force now is $288,304,040. The order has paid $30,000,000 in death claims since it started.

Large appropriations included $10,000 for the Columbus Memorial at Palos, Spain.

Scholarship and radio broadcasts were listed as large items of expense.

MAYOR GETS OVATION

With the tables representing the 65 Knights of Columbus jurisdictions, throughout North America, and all the members clad in colored hats and balloons filling the air, a colorful spectacle ended in singing.

Mayor Curley was accorded a stirring ovation when he arrived at the dinner. Former Atty.-Gen. Herbert Parker, the orator of the occasion, welcomed the Knights of Columbus for the Tercentenary Commission.

Mayor Curley delivered a "minute man"-speech, in which he again brought the city's greetings. Supreme Director John E. Swift presided.

Probe Police Graft in 'Wet' Central Falls

Providence, Aug. 20 (AP)—Charging that police heads and political leaders have received large sums of money for protecting liquor and slot machine establishments in Central Falls from prosecution, State Attorney General Benjamin M. McLyman today announced he had sufficient evidence to indict many politicians of both parties at the September term of the grand jury.

State troopers are in Central Falls investigating the workings of the police department, McLyman revealed. Chief James McCarthy of Central Falls is under suspension, McLyman, in a letter to Mayor Adelard St. George of Central Falls, requests him to keep the police department on its present basis until the state police complete their probe.

Central Falls, long known as one of the wettest cities in the east, has been involved in governmental troubles since October, when the Franco-Polish "bloc" of city council, seeking removal of Chief McCarthy, started a filibuster which lasted until April. During that time no policemen, firemen or other city employes were paid, as the city council did not function and it was impossible to purchase a meal in Central Falls, as eating house licenses expired.

Nugent left the city on an unexplained mission directly concerned with the murder inquiry.

Boston Police Watch for Garrett at Marshfield

The possibility of his known weakness for horses and racing overcoming his fear of apprehension led to Deputy Supt. McDevitt sending Special Officers Peter DiSessa and Paul Crowley to the fair grounds.

It would be characteristic of Garrett's daring, some thought, for him to appear again in the role of driver, disguised in silks, cap and goggles. All drivers and spectators will be under surveillance.

It was just a year ago today that the former leader of a liquor raiding squad was ordered to make a written report of reasons for his failure to report for regular patrol duty at the Joy street station, to which he had been ordered transferred by then Police Commissioner Wilson.

The court also found error in the conviction of Alfred Hoffman, organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, for inciting a riot at Marion, N. C.

AMERICAN BAR IN 'WAR' OVER DRY ISSUE

John Allen of Boston Among Leaders Fighting Referendum on Prohibition

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP)—Prohibition has tossed a bombshell into the annual meeting of the American Bar Association.

The executive committee's action in refusing to withdraw a membership referendum on the dry question portended serious debate as Henry Upson Sims, the president, formally opened the 53d convention today.

Leaders of the opposition were prepared to take their fight on the referendum to the convention floor. Their argument, it was disclosed, was that prohibition is now a question of national policy and not a legal matter.

The referendum, authorized by the executive committee last January, consisting of two questions, went to the 30,000 members through the mails. They were:

"Do you favor a referendum on the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment?

"Should the American Bar Association go on record as favoring the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment?"

There are separate envelopes for the replies. If the first question shows a majority unfavorable to the referendum, the second set of envelopes will be burned unopened. If favorable, the executive committee will open the second set next Fall and announce theresult.

It was understood the action of the executive committee in refusing to withdraw the referendum was unanimous.

Some leaders of delegates opposed to the poll are: Judge Andrew A. Bruce of Northwestern University, former Atty. Gen. John Weston Allen, Judge Frederick F. Faville of Des Moines, Ia., and George Wilson of Quincy, Ill., Anti-Saloon League leader.

A discussion of the work of President Hoover's law observance and enforcement commission by George W. Wickersham, its chairman, was on the afternoon program.

VAN LEAR BLACK, wealthy capitalist and publisher of Baltimore, who is believed to have fallen overboard from his yacht off the New Jersey coast and perished.

BLACK'S YACHT QUITS SEARCH

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—Search by airplanes for the body of Van Lear Black, who fell into the sea from his yacht Sabalo off the New Jersey coast on Monday evening, was abandoned today.

Three planes which pressed the hunt for the Baltimore publisher reported there was such a strong tide out to sea and that ocean currents were moving away from shore in such volume that there was little hope of the body being found near the coastline.

Coast guard boats, the Sabalo itself, and the naval dirigible Los Angeles were still standing by today, but Paul Patterson, editor of the Baltimore Sun, of whose company Mr. Black was chairman of the board, said the yacht was about to give up the search.

WOMEN GUESTS OF CAMBRIDGE COUNCIL

1000 to Have Luncheon at Hotel Commander and Tour Harbor

More than 1000 women guests at the Knights of Columbus convention are dining today at the Hotel Commander as guests of Cambridge Council 74, following a tour of historic sites of Boston.

The party is to devote the afternoon to a tour of Boston harbor. A shore dinner will be served.

The high light of entertainment yesterday was the buffet luncheon served to several hundred delegates and their wives and daughters by Bunker Hill Council 62. The guests were welcomed by the band and a committee of 100 members, headed by Grand Knight James Holland, Jr.

The historic sights of Lexington and Concord were visited by the majority of guests, and a trip to the airport interested several bus loads of visitors.

The Old North Church and the birthplace of Paul Revere attracted many others.

"We are thrilled beyond words to at last see Harvard University and to tread the ground where the beginning of this great nation occurred," said Mrs. William F. Crotty, of Wenatchee, Washington, the only woman attending the convention from her state. Her husband is here as a delegate.

Although there are several children in town with parents, attending the convention, none is more thrilled than the two small sons of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Roberts, of Tyler, Texas.

They are Joseph, Jr., 8, and Walton, 7, whose daddy is state treasurer of the Lone Star State.

Mary Louise Carmody, 12, daughter of Supreme Knight and Mrs. Martin H. Carmody, and Marilyn Swift, 10, daughter of Supreme Director and Mrs. John E. Swift, know exactly how many steps there are in Bunker Hill monument. They climbed it yesterday.

"It is hard to resist that invitation to go sightseeing in historic Boston and Cambridge today but I am devoted also to the convention business," observed Grand Knight William J. Carey, of Erie, Pa., as he put Mrs. Carey aboard a bus with other delegates' wives. "It would be perfect if we could remain another week just to get better acquainted with these wonderfully cordial Boston people."

The most widely-traveled state deputy is said to be John Higgins of St. John, Newfoundland. It has been his custom to cross the continent every year since he was a youth.

When the Iowa delegation gathered in the lobby of the Hotel Statler and sang its "Corn Song," everyone sat up and applauded. The melody won instant favor.

"This is one of the finest treats of our lives," said Mrs. Patrick J. Maher of Santa Barbara, Cal., during a sight-seeing tour. "My husband and I are here as guests of the order, he having won the trip in a membership contest extending over the Pacific Coast states."

PROBE $20,000 BACK BAY FIRE

Fire and police officials started an investigation today into the three-alarm fire at 309 to 315 Huntington ave., Back Bay, that netted five on the injured list, seven persons rescued and 100 others driven out in the $20,000 blaze.

The flames were discovered in an elevator shaft and had gained great headway before apparatus arrived.

The injured:

Edward Whalen, Engine 37. Overcome by gas.

Edward Kelley, Engine 31. Overcome by gas.

An unidentified man who was beaten by a crowd when he hurled stones and bottles at firemen.

Mrs. Mary Melaugh, occupant of a fourth floor apartment, was awakened by the barking of her dog, "Babe Ruth." She rushed to the street and pulled the alarm.

Meanwhile Miss Nancy Shields, living at 309 Huntington ave., had been awakened, and she aided children out of the building.

Mrs. Annie Stanley, 60, was rescued from her third floor suite but insisted that two trunks be taken along with her.

Motorcycle Officer Augustus Crehan rushed into the building and led Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Clark to the street, then returned for their two-year-old son, Robert, Jr.

AIMEE M'PHERSON FIGHTS WITH HER MOTHER OVER GIRL CLERK

HUGE SNAKE FIGURES IN DISPUTE

Evangelist's Collapse Said to Have Been Caused by Boa Constrictor

Los Angeles, Aug. 20—The mystery shrouding Aimee Semple McPherson's isolation at a Malibu Beach cottage remained unsolved today as conflicting reports of illness, blindness, a face-lifting operation and a fistic encounter with her mother were answered by the evangelist.

Guards stationed at windows and doors of the cottage, Mrs. McPherson denied herself to all but a few, while from numerous purported official sources emanated statements about her condition.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of the Evangelist, undergoing treatment for a broken nose which she says her daughter gave her, issued a demand that Mrs. McPherson return to her pulpit at Angelus Temple and show her congregation "the affects of the face lifting operation" she says the noted pastor underwent recently.

"SNAKE" CHARGES

Then there is the business of "snake-throwing."

This proved to be a somewhat elusive episode.

Mrs. McPherson's secretary, Miss Mae Waldron, over whom the quarrel is reported to have developed, was reported as saying that a woman went to the temple about 10 days ago and tossed a big boa constrictor into Aimee's room, whereupon the evangelist collapsed.

The report that the snake, in reality, was tossed at Mrs. Kennedy by Miss Waldron and Mrs. McPherson, in order to frighten the former from the temple, was hotly denied by Mrs. Kennedy.

"Whoever said that has a depraved and diseased mind," she said. "I never saw the snake, and I know nothing about it."

DENIES HITTING MOTHER

The Los Angeles Examiner today said Mrs. McPherson had denied striking her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, as the latter charged.

The paper quoted Mrs. McPherson as follows:

"I did not hit mother. I wanted to talk to her about some things she had been saying and she started to leave the room. I asked her to stay and talk to me. She threw herself on the floor and screamed and yelled, as she had done before. Then she went away and severed all connections with the temple."

Regarding her physical condition the Examiner quoted Mrs. McPherson as saying:

SEIZE $50,000 RUM, 3 MEN

Providence, R. I., Aug. 20 (AP)—Eight hundred cases of imported liquors, with an approximate value of $50,000, were seized by state troopers of Wickford barracks early today. The contraband was believed to be part of a cargo landed in Narragansett bay at night.

Two auto trucks, three men arrested, and the liquor, were turned over to the Federal prohibition department. The prisoners gave their names as John Brown, Mills Hotel, Bleecker st., New York; Joseph Paul Zilch, Grant st., Boston, and Frank Bernadet, North sq., Boston.

Both trucks bore Massachusetts registration plates, but police said one was registered to Samuel Wainwright of Berkeley, L. I., and the other to John A. Ferguson of Pleasant st., Attleboro.

Catch 400-Lb. Shark Off the Beach at Gloucester

Gloucester, Aug. 20—A shark, nine feet long and weighing about 400 pounds, was found nearly dead today in shallow water at Long Beach, the first found in that vincinity in more than 20 years.

It was found by Joseph and Robert Huckins, of Long Beach, who hauled it out of the water and killed it. After scores of members of the summer colony had viewed it, the monster was buried on the beach.

Veteran fishermen who went to have a look at it said the shark had evidently got in too close to the shore and been left stranded behind a sandbar when the tide went out.

rage died down that the police arrived on the scene. Now what excites my curiosity is this: Did the interested parties have time to remove 30 machines from the premises before the police arrived? And if they didn't have time, why didn't the police seize the machines?

"This slot machine racket has been sort of a jumbled affair for almost a year due to a quarrel between the big shots as to who was entitled to install in certain places about the city.

"Several of our local politicians have carried slot machines as a sideline and there was a good deal of rivalry among them for locations. The boys began to get nasty and there was considerable double-crossing going on with a few raids thrown in for good measure.

RACKET THIEVES

"Finally one of them obtained the exclusive rights and the others had to take the chances of having their machines seized. Under this arrangement the racket thrived, but the big shots were not satisfied to reap the harvest in clubs and speakeasies.

"They came out into the open and before long the machines were prominently displayed in grocery stores throughout the city. I went to Mayor Casassa and told him the situation was becoming unbearable and urged that immediate action be taken to curb gambling in the city.

"At the same time I announced publicity that if no action was taken I would clean up the joints myself. I had been receiving hundreds of letters from mothers and wives pleading with me to correct conditions that were draining the wages of their husbands and sons.

"I was given power to investigate these conditions by City Solicitor Wendall Murray and I called on Chief of Police Tighe at the Revere station. I told him that I could lead him and a squad of officers to several joints within a few minutes, but the chief told me I was all wet.

ALARM DELAYED

"After the gang shooting at Veterans' Hall the citizens of Revere can probably decide who is the wettest, Chief Tighe or I.

"I am also interested in find-out why the teletype at the Revere police station was not used immediately after word of the gun-fight was received.

"It is possible that the officer on the desk was too busy preparing to send men to the scene of the shooting to think of turning to the teletype and broadcasting to nearby cities and towns the description of the machines in which those involved in the affair made their getaway.

"In this connection it is interesting to note that a Revere politician who was in the Veterans' Hall at the time the shots were fired left hastily with friends and was wisked away to Salem before the alarm was sent out."

Macauley's recital of event's before and after the shooting affray followed an attack on Mayor Casassa by Dr. John F. Walsh in which the latter charged that the present administration was the worst in Revere's history.

The Mayor stated that he had no comment to make on Walsh's allegations of official laxity in dealing with vice in the city and that "there is a time and a place for discussing charges of such a nature."

Goldstein and Preston are held as material witnesses. They were released on bail after they left Chelsea Memorial Hospital, where they were treated after the shooting.

TEETH CLUE IN 'GHOST' DEATH

By a Staff Correspondent

Springfield, Vt., Aug. 20—The victim of Vermont's year-old mystery death, upon which the nation's attention has been focused for the past week, was believed today to be Mrs. Ruby Chickering Green, of Lynn, Mass.

She once worked on a farm in Chester where the body, wrongly identified as that of Mrs. Catherine R. Packard, was found last August.

Mrs. Packard, alleged author of a cuicide note found on the body, has identified a picture of Mrs. Green as that of a woman she had seen in Troy, N. Y., in 1926.

That is the year that Mrs. Belle Chickering, of Essex st., Lynn, mother of Mrs. Green, last heard from her daughter, then a nurse at Utica, N. Y.

Mrs. Chickering, who formerly lived in Hardwick, communicated with State's Atty. Lawrence Edgerton and Detective Edwin C. Brown and declared the buried woman's description tallied with that of her daughter.

The unidentified woman buried at Chester had 12 teeth missing and Mrs. Green had lost 10 teeth during a treatment for tetanus. Dentists who extracted them will be asked to attempt identification.

SCHARTON PLEA TO BE HEARD

At the request of Atty. William R. Scharton of Reading, the State Ballot Law Commission today summoned Atty. Harold W. Sullivan of Boston before the commission at the Statehouse.

Both Scharton and Sullivan are candidates for the Democratic nomination for attorney-general.

Scharton claims Sullivan was, on his own affidavit, a resident of Brooklyn, June 25, 1626, and is ineligible to be a candidate because of the constitutional, requirement calling for a five-year residence in Massachusetts prior to seeking the nomination.

The commission did not pass on the question that Scharton filed his protest after the time for such action had expired.

Green Nails, Yellow Eyes for Milady

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Green or black fingernails and rose eye-shadows are in store this fall for the nation's billion-spending beauty seekers, if cosmetology's calculations find popular favor.

Manicures to match women's costumes were named today by H. L. Franklin, managing director of the organized beauticians of the country, as the latest wrinkle in the beauty game, designed to keep American women spending at a record-breaking clip.

Preparing for a national convention here of what he claims to be the nation's fourth largest industry—making women pretty—Franklin was arranging demonstrations of color-scheme fingernails and "beauty-enhancing" eye shadows.

CUP YACHTS IN NEW TESTS

BY TOM HORGAN

Newport, R. I., Aug. 20 (AP)—Four aspirants for the honors of defending the America's Cup, went to the starting line today with the Enterprise, sailed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, holding the best record to date.

Enterprise, smallest of the four, has been able to sail a greater mileage in competition than any of the other three candidates. She has won the same number of first places as Weetamoe, with the Yankee, Boston candidate, standing third in performance to date. Whirlwind resumes competition as the laggard of the fleet.

Ten days of trial races are scheduled, although the committee of the New York Yacht Club, which is selecting the defender, reserves to itself the right to terminate competition when it has arrived at a choice.

VISITING MAYOR TO USE YACHT

Lord Mayor and the Mayoress Reuben Salter of Boston, England, and the members of their party will have the palatial yacht Carib, property of Thomas J. A. Johnson, city greeter, at their disposal while they are guests of the city during the Tercentenary observance of Boston Week in September.

City Greeter Johnson today tendered the vessel to Mayor Curley for use in entertaining the visitors and his offer was promptly accepted. The Mayor plans a trip to the North and South Shores and a pilgrimage to Plymouth Rock for the entertainment of the guests.

Acceptances of his invitation to attend the reception to be tendered the visitors from Old Boston in Boston Garden, Sept. 16, were received by Mayor Curley today from His Worship Lieut-Col. H. E. SACCO MEETING IN WORCESTER IS BANNED

Permit for Common Is Denied and School for Young Reds Exposed

Worcester, Aug. 20—Coincident with the disclosure of a school for young Communists here, city officials today rejected application of the Workers Communist party for a permit for a demonstration on the Common Friday, the third anniversary of the execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

The application was provisionally rejected by City Messenger Edwin C. French, who said he would not issue it unless the police chief recommended it. Chief Foley announced he would not approve the application.

The demonstration may be held in defiance of the law, according to members of the radical organization, and at the meeting it is proposed to discuss the case of two girls, held in New York, one of whom revealed the Communist school here.

The school, it was learned, has been in existence here for nine years and will open its sessions again next month with the beginning of the regular public school term.

Children of all ages are assembled at Belmont Hall or at party headquarters on Clayton st. and taught the history of Communism and the militant creed of Russian Soviet rule.

Revolt against capitalism, revolutionary hymns and salutes to the flag of Red Russia are also taught. The classes average about 20 pupils. The school is said to be one of the major activities of a district which has headquarters in Boston under Organizer Shiffman.

Miss Aili Halme, 23, of Worcester, and Miss Mabel Husa, 20, a North Dakota girl, were arrested when a summer camp for instruction of children, with about 100 children in attendance, was raided at Van Etten, N. Y. The Worcester girl told of teaching classes here.

The two girls were sentenced to three months in the County Jail on charges of desecrating the flag, and a campaign to free them has been launched by radicals in the vicinity of Rochester.

Churchill Urges MacDonald Ouster

Minster, Kent, England, Aug. 20 (AP)—A plea for unification of the Conservative Party in an effort to arouse the party's supporters and oust what he called "this wretched Socialist government," was made by Winston Churchill today. His speech seemed likely to be taken as the opening gun of a predicted Tory drive to defeat the labor regime.

Missing

MISSING from her home for five days Annie Morino, of 169 Emerald st., Malden, is being sought by her parents. They have asked the police to assist.

SEEK MISSING MALDEN GIRL

Mysteriously missing for five days, Annie Marino, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Marino of 169 Emerald st., Malden, is being sought by Malden police on request of her parents, who fear for her safety.

The girl left for work last Thursday morning, but did not report at the Converse rubber factory, where she was employed. That night she telephoned her stepmother that she was having supper with a girl friend and was going to a show, but she would not tell her friend's name. She did not return home.

Although she has relatives in New Jersey, her parents do not believe she is on her way there. They described her as an attractive brunette, five feet two inches tall, weighing 110 pounds, and wearing a blue ensemble suit, white knitted cap, fawn-colored stockings and light straw shoes.

TWO CLEARED IN FAMILY ROW

The courthouse blues came into Samuel Schulman's life in a large way today, and his mother-in-law and wife were cleared in municipal court of an assault charge against them.

Even Schulman's waving of a tattered shirt in court failed to impress Judge Duff, who declared the family disturbance which occurred in the corridor outside Probate Court was not sufficiently robust to take on the dignity of an assault.

The Schulmans and the mother-in-law, Mrs. Rebecca Elfman of Crawford st., Roxbury, had been in Probate Court in the matter of settling custody of the four-year-old Schulman son.

Schulman, who lives in Stoughton, claimed when he attempted to kiss the child, his mother-in-law punched him, his wife slapped his face and his shirt was badly torn.

Dying Gate Tender Bars the Crossing as His Last Act

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 20 (AP)—Even in death, Caleb Gibbard guarded the Oakley avenue crossing of the Michigan Central Railroad.

Automobiles piled up for a block or more on each side of the crossing last night waited and waited for the train to come. No trains were even in sight.

The clamor set up by honking horns attracted police who found Gibbard dead. He had lowered the gates so that the crossing would be protected until some one came to take his post.

RECORD LIST OF ENTRIES FOR AMERICAN RACES SATURDAY

With a record-breaking number of entrants, spectators at the Boston Evening American's swimming meet for girls and women are guaranteed some of the most thrilling contests ever staged by mermaids in local waters.

When the starter's gun is fired on Saturday at 2 p. m., at the Charles River basin there will be a display of speed on the part of girl swimmers such as this section has never seen.

TO DEFEND TITLE

The stellar event on the program is the New England A. A. A. U., championship mile, in which Barbara Greenwood of Whitin Community Association of Whitinsville will defend her title, against a classy field.

There are 21 entrants in this event, but the two expected to give Miss Greenwood the most trouble are Gussie Schnabel, of the Boston Swiming Association, former junior champion; Joan McSheehy, of the Whitin Community Association, half mile champion, and Claire Walker, of the same outfit.

In the 880 yards freestyle open, with 24 entrants, Millicent Cramp, of the Whitin Community Association; Bernice Taylor, of the same club, and Lillian and Irene Davis, of the Boston Swimming Association, are looked upon to fight for the first three places.

Joan McSheehy will defend her title in the 220 yards backstroke open, against a field of ten, of whom Helen Delaney and Anna Tully are expected to give her close competition. Helen Delaney is the Boston Swimming Association's ace in this class, and Anna Tully occupies the same position with the Worcester Swimming Association. Alice A. Roe of the Miami Swimming Association is apt to prove a dark horse, however.

The 220 yards breaststroke open is likely to go to Barbara Norris of the Worcester Swimming Association, the New England champion. There are only ten entrants in this class, and Mary A. Doherty of Boston, with Florence Hattersly of Worcester, are given the edge.

One hundred yards freestyle open has 15 entrants, with Helen Johns of the W. S. A. of Brookline defending her title. Mildred Toomey of Boston is the former champion, and with Mary M. Doherty, also of Boston, will force Miss Johns to extend herself to win.

By far, the largest class is the 50-yard free style open, with 38 entrants, of whom the fastest are expected to be Lara Wheaton, Boston Swimming Association; Louise Stimpson, Whitin Community Association, and Cecilia Murphy, W. S. A. of Brookline.

The 50-yard free style for girls 14 years of age should be taken by Mary M. Doherty, of the Boston Swimming Association, according to the experts, with Betty Chapman, of the same outfit, and Dorothy McSheehy, of the Whitin Community Association, crowding her for place. There are 32 entered in this race.

LARGE FIELD ENTERED

The 100-yard free style for novices probably will develop into a free-for-all among the 27 entrants, with the possibility that Marion N. Fettes, of the Boston Swimming Association may amaze the experts with a burst of speed. It is her first race, but she has been cutting through the water at a great clip in practice.

The fancy diving contest, with 16 entered, should go to Esther Morison who has been champion for four years, with Gertrude Costello and Tina and Tella Morison fighting for the other places. Miss Costello represents the Boston Swimming Association and the Morison sisters the W. S. A. of Brookline.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

A correspondent in your letter column asks if there is such an accomplishment as the Bostonian accent, citing Bishop Hughes as having this possession.

There used to be a nasal twang in sounding words very noticeable in the Hub that was associated with Bostonians many years ago, but this has faded away or it is not noticeable these days.

Nothing has taken this twang out of the Yankee so much as the advantages of travel and coming in contact with people from other nations in Boston. If the old Bostonian spoke through his nose more than his modern representative, it was largely because he did not pay any attention to adenoids.

It was adenoids that made the twang with east wind blowing through the nasal passage. Operations have changed all this.

Tells How to Stop Auto Accidents

Editor Boston American:

Thomas A. Murray of Hingham is right. I advocated the same thing long ago and I am now more convinced than ever that the only way to reduce the number of automobile accidents is to stop all parking and to revoke the license of a driver whose gross negligence causes a death.

Seven years of diligent study of the situation convinced me that unless this is done no safety campaign will ever reduce the number of automobile accidents.

Lists Five Characters as Meanest in Boston

Editor Boston American:

Who are the meanest persons in Boston? Here they are in my estimation:

Those who yank pages out of books in telephone booths.

Those who persistently try to occupy two seats in railroad trains and defy one remonstrating with them by declaring they are stockholders.

The person who will not take his turn at the stamp window of the South Station Postoffice, but tries to edge his way ahead of you with his ponderous shoulders, because he believes he is bigger than you are.

The person who resorts to the telephone, calls up his competitor and rakes him over the coals with abusive language, and even curses that he does not deserve and cannot answer because bang goes the telephone before he can reply.

Finds Women More Agreeable Than Men

Editor Boston American:

Are women more agreeable and affable in summer than men?

He bases it upon the fact that women wear only two pounds and ten ounces of clothing in summer months, while men are burdened with eight pounds, six ounces of clothing.

The weight of clothing has much to do with making up the temperament of people. You will find people more pleasant in winter than in summer, because they at that season do not feel the weight of clothing to any great extent.

This statement is also backed up by Dr. Eugene L. Fisk, of Life Extension Institute, of New York. If you want a man to feel happy in summer, let him go everywhere in his shirt sleeves. This is the long and short of it.

Wanderings Show This Man Boston Is Dry

Editor Boston American:

I wish to agree most heartily with Mr. Sturgis that Boston is Dry. I, too, see almost no drunken people in Boston, not more than two in a year and I walk around Boston a great deal.

And this sobbing about the young people drinking. Why there never was a more sober bunch of young people. They have our grandparents "scun a mile" for soberness and interest in worth while things.

If the "Wets" among the older generation were getting all they wanted to drink under Prohibition there would not be such loud sobbing. They were never a law and order crowd.

Hypocrisy—there are more hypocrites in a group of ten Wets than all the Drys from sea to sea. Why their sudden interest in young people? Why all those crocodile tears? They are crying because the liquor traffic is dead—dead—dead. After all, the wettest part of Boston and Massachusetts is the Press. No one expected the newspapers to get dry in ten years.

E. F. WATERMAN.

Too Much Sickness, Too Many Funerals

Editor Boston American:

Mr. Coolidge is right. People give altogether too little attention to their health. It was always thus, and more than probably always will be.

In every state in the union there are people who will insist on being sick. Many die. Some needlessly. The yearly losses from funerals runs into many millions of dollars.

Better health and fewer and cheaper funerals would greatly increase the power of the nation. It is our economic duty to keep well.

Says Time Now, to Halt Tercentenary Plans

Editor Boston American:

Allow me space in your paper for a few lines. I think it is time to call the tercentenary to a close. We have no money to carry it through. English people who were invited to this country for a few days to celebrate in towns named for similar towns in England, are begging money out of this country to repair an old church in England, and the people in Boston are subscribing money to do the work. Ridiculous.

If there is any one here who has so much money to spare give it to your own people who are out of work and have no victuals to eat.

It isn't the work of the people here to repair old churches. England has money enough, let her do it herself. I consider it an insult to this country, but it is not the first and won't be the last.

Don't be a traitor to your country any longer. Put a stop to it now.

Greatly Pleased With Sunday Editorials

Editor Boston American:

For years I have been an ardent reader of the full page editorials of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

They are more than editorials; they are powerful sermons in themselves, and the editor seems to be talking to his congregation.

Stories on fear, self control, the straight path, "money is almost all powerful—almost," "brain is more important than brawn," and hundreds of other great editorials are wonderful anad true—and a great deal can be learned from absorbing them.

When we are young, we are happy-go-lucky creatures, nary a worry or ill feeling against the world, but as years roll by something creeps in our system and changes the complexion in us and makes us afraid of many things.

What are we afraid of? As long as we are honest in God's way, there is nothing to fear.

Factory Girl Lauds Stand Against Wage Slashing

Editor Boston American:

I have just read your editorial on the slashing of wages, and I want to take this opportunity of letting you know that I think your stand in the matter is correct. The cutting of wages should not be allowed.

I am one of eight children that my mother has to keep, for I have not done any work for more than a year. I am 18 years old, and I started this week working in a shoe factory at Lowell at a salary of $7 a week. Now you know that this money can't be of much help to my mother, because it takes that much to keep a girl of my years in clothes these days. So you can see we have got to go without lots of things we need because of small wages.

I hope that you will give this note space in your paper so that it will wake some of the employers up to the fact that they are not paying a living wage.

Seeks Light on Origin of Massachusetts' Name

Editor Boston American:

Can anyone give the origin of the name Massachusetts?

I have spent several days in Boston preparing for a lecture on "Historic Points in Boston" for a course on American cities in a western college. But I can find nothing very satisfactory on the name Massachusetts.

It is no doubt of Indian origin. It is derived by some from the "greatest king of the Indians," Massasoit, or as another declares Massasoiet. Is this not farfetched?

If the name means a range of high hills, will someone throw light upon it?

"Irish Terriers" Sold for Six Pence

Editor Boston American:

I've just learned from a friend of mine who has just returned from Ireland that you can buy an Irish terrier all through that country for six pence. In pushing him further to explain this, he replied, they have put the symbol of, that dog on the six pence piece. The half penny piece is decorated with a litter of pigs. A mother hen and her brood sparkle on the half penny.

Three cheers for the Irish Free State for establishing an animal coinage and not sticking royalty there.

CAROL MAY PICK NEW BRIDE

Bucharest, Rumania, Aug. 20 (AP)—His olive branch spurned, King Carol today was said in court circles to have decided not to press his further fight for annulment of Queen Helen's divorce from him, but rather to allow her to go her way and he his, the divorce to become permanent.

In such a case, rumors had it, he might choose another bride. The name of at least one former royal European house was mentioned in the connection.

TOWN MILL, HINGHAM

It is run by tidewater, rare in these days of power plants. The town privileges were given as early as 1643, when the mill was first established. It has been running ever since, and today, it is operating as in the past, its interior piled high with full sacks.

RAN DAY AND NIGHT

Its charter requires that the Hingham Mill do custom grinding for the townspeople, but this service is not in large demand now. Huge teams plied daily from the mill not so many years ago, carrying the products about the countryside. Two millers were kept busy, the mill running night and day.

The old granite grinding stones were recently replaced by French burr stones. Throughout the town of Hingham, one runs across old millstones from this establishment, used as doorsteps mostly. The upper stone does the turning, not the lower.

STARTED IN 1643

The mill was started by Anthony Eames, Samuel Ward, and B. Allen, who were allowed by the town, to set up a corn mill near the cove. That was in 1643.

In 1645, Mr. Wilson is mentioned as being removed from the position of miller. Numerous conveyances of the mill site are on record. At one time the shares numbered thirty-two.

Benjamin Andrews, whose family was prominent in Hingham history has been mentioned, at one time, in connection with the mill. The Hingham Grain Mill succeeded Andrews. Then the title, for the first time, was vested in one concern.

The grinding wheels are housed in a heavily raftered shed built in 1825, which replaced the old shelter. It is equipped with two run of stones.

Jonathan G. Burrell gave lifelong service as miller, which ended in 1891. He was also sexton of the village meeting house for more than 50 years. B. W. Meservey is now manager of the establishment, having been connected with the mill for more than 45 years. The mill is now incorporated.

Cornmeal and whole wheat flour are made in the mill now, but tons of flour have left its shelter in olden days. The interior is interesting, especially if the tide is right for grinding, when the mill can operate.

OAKLAND NOW ONE OF LOWEST PRICED 8'S

Oakland becomes one of America's lowest-priced eights and the Pontiac Big Six invades the small car price field as a result of a sharply-reduced schedule of Oakland-Pontiac prices announced by Dwight Hersey, general manager, Oakland Motor Co. of New England.

"Oakland price cuts range as high as $170 on some models," said Mr. Hersey, "while the base price on the lowest priced closed model has been reduced $150, the new base price being $895 against the former minimum, of $1045 on closed models.

"Similarly the former Pontiac base price of $745 has been cut to $665, a drop of $80, with even larger reductions up to $110 on some body types."

"These reductions are made," said Mr. Hersey, "because in the winter the factory will present two new cars which, while changed enough to classify as new models, will remain practically unchanged in appearance, size and design. The two new cars will have the same type engines used in the cars now offered."

WORKED LONG ON BUICK 8

"An eight cylinder motor presented neither unusual nor unsolvable problems to Buick engineers when the company was ready to introduce it in its cars," said H. K. Noyes to some newspapermen a few days ago at the Noyes Buick Company salesrooms. "For over three years this straight eight has been going through its tests."

"I'll say Buick knew something about eights," one motor editor stated. "In 1925 at the New York Show I was talking with some of the Buick factory executives, who said that their engineers were perfecting eights, and we newspapermen know that they have been doing it ever since."

"That's just it," Mr. Noyes said. "Buick engineers have access to data developed at the General Motors Proving Grounds, the largest in the country. There has not been a V-type or straight eight on the market, here or abroad which has not been tested there by Buick.

"The cars are not merely run thousands upon thousands of miles for power, smoothness of operation and durability comparison, but are torn down, rebuilt, and then taken apart again. Buick has a section there for its own men and its own tests, which are strenuous to the last degree. With its modern factory laboratory, plus its 25 years' experience in building successful units, Buick entered the straight eight field with a confidence that its future was brighter than ever.

Big Demand for Chevrolet Trucks

An increase of 20 per cent in production of light delivery trucks during the first half of this year over the same period in 1929 was announced by manager of the commercial car division of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Commuters' Night at Copley

E. K. Clive announces an innovation for the Copley Theater. For his new season at the Back Bay playhouse, Tuesday evenings have been designated as a commuter's night. On this evening, instead of the customary 8:30 curtain, the performance will begin at 7:30, bringing the closing hour in the neighborhood of 10 o'clock or earlier. The theater opens Saturday, Aug. 30.

NASH HEAD GETS GOOD REPORT

It was a very optimistic report that F. M. Rollins, retail division manager, gave Pres. H. C. Hart of the Nash New England Co. to take with him to the monthly meeting of the Metropolitan dealers. August had just finished its first week and the statement showed that more new Nash cars had been sold at retail than in any other week since one ending May, 1929. It also had July compilations showing new Nash retail deliveries made the best month for 1930.

Emphasizing, too, the upward curve in Nash sales for the month of July, which by comparison placed last month ahead of July a year ago, and as further evidence of bright skies ahead, Monday's retail sales were substantially better than usual.

'PINT-OF-GAS' PRIZE OFFER

The Grove Hall Chevrolet Co., with salesroom at 460 Blue Hill ave., Roxbury, and 1205 Columbus ave., Roxbury, are this week having a "Pint o' Gas" contest. The big idea is to see how far one can drive a Chevrolet on one pint of gasoline. Any person who has a license to operate a gear shift car may try this proposition. There are three cash awards for the most mileage.

The car used is a stock 6-cylinder Chevrolet model. A glass jar has been placed just over the hood with direct feed to the carburetor; an even pint of gasoline is poured in this jar. The main feed from tank is cut off. The contest ends Saturday, August 23, at 9 a. m.

Miss Brazier Quits Club Work at 80

Founder of 10 Organizations Will Retire September 6; Plans Tea for Associates

By NANCY BREWSTER

This is real news for the clubwomen of Massachusetts.

Miss Marion Howard Brazier, veteran clubwoman of the State and founder of 10 large organizations, retires from all club activities September 6, the date of her 80th birthday.

As a signal of the occasion she will give an informal tea for 13 of her club associates at the Copley Plaza, and at that time reminiscences which only club women are privileged to hold dear, will go the rounds.

One of the city's most prominent clubwomen, Miss Brazier brings to a close years of active interests, years that have taken her all over the country and afforded her the opportunity to shake hands with Presidents from Abraham Lincoln down to but not including President Hoover; interests that have filled columns of news in the papers of the country and kept her constantly in the public eye.

Journalist, lecturer and author, Miss Brazier is one of the best known clubwomen in this state. Wherever club life is in existence the name of Marion Howard Brazier is firmly implanted in the minds of the clubwomen as THE clubwoman, who valued clubdom and did much for it.

Perhaps her greatest achievement was the organization of the Professional Women's Club which now numbers close to 1000 women of many, many fields. As the founder of the club and its president for many of the first years, Miss Brazier now holds the distinction of honorary head.

Such clubs as the Ex-Regents Club of the D. A. R., Massachusetts' D. A. R. Founders Society, Parliamentary Law Club, The 13 Club, Old Glory and three D. A. R. chapters owe their existence to the vision and untiring efforts of Miss Brazier.

The history of the Professional Women's Club is from her pen as well as other club pamphlets and journalistic matter. "Perpetrations" is also hers.

HAD MANY ACTIVITIES

A woman of many activities in patriotic society, as well, her lineage taking her back to John Paul Jones, she has been repeatedly recognized by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution as a flag worker.

She has no hobbies, save the correct use of the flag, if such can be so called.

With particular pride does Miss Brazier point to the fact that she has earned her living since 1868, serving for many years on newspapers in departmental work. She lists as her chief assets a keen sense of humor, a heart kept young by outside interest and an inimitable memory.

Miss Brazier can recall incidents and people that take one back to the early 70's. But not alone does she recall them. They are always attended with identifying reminiscences of infinite detail.

Born in 1850, in Charlestown, she moved to Waverley with her family three years later. Her father was a volunteer in the Civil War, a fact of which she is proud.

STARTED IN 1866

In 1866 she went to work and until September 6 she will still be at it. When her health started to fail in 1888 she went to California and that date was the starting point of her writing career. A letter, which she sent back to a friend, was so newsy and bright that it was published in a Boston journal and she was recalled to take up newspaper work as her life's job.

She came back and Miss Marion Howard Brazier interested herself in all things womanly and practically revolutionized the club world.

At Trinity Court, where she has maintained a small apartment for the past 33 years, one of many interesting things is her "graveyard," her file of every conceivable bit of information that a writer needs to carry on.

Gold and Silver Glints in Evening

Model from Alfred Rothols, Inc.

THERE'S A glint of silver coming, and a hint of gold. And not all in the hills, either. In fact they are both very much in evidence in new fall evening clothes. Of course we have metallic cloths with us always, in one way or another, but this season one simply must have a "glint" or a "hint" somewhere, in order to feel that one has a well-rounded wardrobe.

• • •

IN EVENING gowns for the new season richness of fabric is more important than any other phase of the mode.

• • •

THE VERY lovely and versatile dress pictured may be transformed by the whisk of a jacket from dinner to evening attire. It was designd by Schiaparelli, who has, heretofore, been noted for her outstanding achievements in sport clothes. This costume is of supple lame, its background of vivid blue, the all-over metal design in soft tones of green, gold and orange. The one-piece gown is form fitting, and has a round decolletage.

• • •

• • •

LAME EVENING gowns are certainly in the picture for fall and winter. These are especially suited to some of the newest trends in silhouettes. (This silhouette is one which has a slightly jutting out peplum, and an underskirt which is very narrow at the knees and then flares out from about the middle calf.)

• • •

METALLIC CLOTH evening wraps are stunning, and very adaptable, as they may be worn with more different colors and a greater variety of fabrics than any wrap except the fur one. Many of them are lined with plain colored lames or lovely soft velvets. Dark brown or black fur collars and cuffs make very chic and distinctive garments.

Mrs. Grace M. Poole Lauds Spanish City in Letter to Friend

Barcelona is one of the most important Spanish cities despite its revolutionary tendencies, Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, first vice-president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and former head of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, now traveling abroad, writes to a Brockton clubwoman-friend.

Mrs. Poole is gathering sufficient material for her current events lectures, which she gives during the winter months before women's clubs.

The Bay State clubwoman also visited Monte Carlo and watched the Casino in full swing, but failed however, to give satisfction to her slight whim—to play just once even if she did lose 10 francs.

"As you watched every type known to humanity, almost, you wondered just how they began," she described the Casino throng. Many of them carried little books most elaborately worked out in the system that was bound to break the bank. But the so-called breaking of the bank had only taken place three times in the life of the Casino."

Mrs. Poole returns to this country Sept. 7 to arrive at Eastern Point, New London, Ct., the following day to attend the three-day session of the New England Conference of State Federations of Women's Clubs.

CHARLIE ROGERS TO PRODUCE 'MILLIE' AS HIS FIRST R. K. O. FEATURE

NOTED FILM EXECUTIVE IN NEW POSITION

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 20—We always get a certain satisfaction in hearing how well Donald Henderson Clarke's novels are going both as fiction and as movies. We wouldn't like to be trite and say "we knew Don when" but we did know him when he was writing publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in New York and [illegible] big stories. We also knew Charles R. Rogers when he was general manager for Lewis J. Selznick.

Louella O. Parsons

We now welcome Mr. Rogers as R. K. O. producer. Of course, Charlie has been producing pictures for a long time and that title is an old one. Still it is interesting to know his first picture to be released by R. K. O. It will be Don Clarke's "Millie." Charlie Rogers read Millie and bought it from galley proofs. Charley Kenyon will write the adaptation and John Francis Dillon has been borrowed from First National to direct. The affiliation of Rogers and Dillon is an old one. Jack Dillon directed for Charlie when he was associated with First National.

THE WEST COAST, the East Coast and the foreign studios of Paramount are to function as one. Instead of B. P. Schulberg being boss supreme of Hollywood he will not devote his time to all the studios. Walter Wanger, general manager of production, will no longer be stationed entirely in New York. He too, will travel from studio to studio. His first mission is to remain here for several months and keep a personal eye on production. Mr. Schulberg will work directly under Mr. Wanger, and in the new arrangement he becomes managing director of Paramount instead of general manager of the West Coast Studios. Harry M. Goetz is announced as comptroller of the entire production department. I suppose that means instead of dividing costs as has been the practice in the past all production expenses will come under one head.

* * *

YOU MAY LIST "Common Clay" as old fashioned, but you cannot lose sight of the fact that Constance Bennett is in the picture. We may also say no maid ever wore clothes with the air of this young woman, but you cannot lose sight of the fact that you look at her a second time. She has the looks, the carriage and the personality. Connie's next, "Sin Takes a Holiday," starts this week at Pathe. Horace Jackson is doing the adaptation, with Paul Stein directing. This is said to be a great drama, and when we consider that Robert Milton wrote it it ought to be good, for he knows his stuff. There is a rumor that Adolphe Menjou will play opposite Miss Bennett.

Constance Bennett

IMAGINE BEING ABLE to sing in six different languages. What a lot of songs one could sing. Leni Stengel, German girl who has just been signed by Herbert Brenon for one of the leading roles in "Beau Ideal," is described to us as a beautiful young woman who sings in six different languages. Of course, I suppose that means she talks these six languages too., Singing wouldn't do her a lot of good. She was formerly on the stage in "This Thing Called Love" and Cheer Up" and this is her first appearance as a movie actress.

* * *

YOU COULD HARDLY believe that one picture could do as much for an actress as "Holiday" has done for Ann Harding. She was interesting before but she is positively sensational now. So much so that all of her production plans for the future are lined up. Her next "The Greater Love" at Pathe, will give her the polished Clive Brook as one of her leading men and her husband, Harry Bannister, as the other. The Clive Brook family has been summering at Vancouver, near neighbors of the Richard Barthelmesses and Mr. Brook's first picture upon his return will be the Ann Harding special. Eugene Walter is the author and Rollo Lloyd will do the directing.

OF INTEREST in Hollywood Marion Davies sends word she now hopes to be home from Europe the first week in September. We hope that is true for everyone has missed Marion, and Hollywood certainly isn't the same without her. Every time we see John Erskine we feel embarrassed. We accused him of writing scathing things for the British press when alas, alas, it was Sir John Ervine. It might have been a brainstorm, or perhaps only a case of confusion of names. Janet Gaynor has been busy denying that she and her husband, Lydell Peck, are seeking a divorce. Ever since her reconciliation with the Fox company and the plans made to co-star with Charles Farrell, Hollywood has been alive with gossip that all is not well in the Peck menage. However, this has been officially denied.

FENWAY WILL OPEN AUG. 29

The Publix Fenway, closed for the past month for thorough renovation, will re-open Friday, August 29. To commemorate the occasion the management will present as the opening attraction, the screen version of "Queen High."

New in every respect from the marquee and upright bodering the side walk and front down through the back-stage, the New Fenway is artistic and comfortable. All new equipment for the perfect presentation of talking pictures has been installed as well as the big screen known as a magnascope.

An all new organ to be played as a feature of the Fenway presentations has been installed.

Stage Who's Who

The original "Girl of the Yukon" was the first white girl born in Dawson City, Alaska, on the banks of the Yukon river. Thence the name Yukona. Her last name is Cameron. Al Trahan, with whom she has been associated in vaudeville and now in "Second Little Show" staying third week at the Wilbur, refers to her always as Lady Yukona. She has lost as much as eight pounds during a strenuous performance as Trahan's straight foil. She must always be in perfect physical condition for the performance. She exercises every day. Miss Cameron first took piano lessons from a traveling teacher of the Yukon country. In a small town 60 miles from the Arctic Circle, she made her first public appearance. She was eight years old and the occasion was a local benefit. Some years later tragedy brought her to the states. Her father, a mining engineer, succumbed after too long exposure in the frozen north. Yukona's family then migrated further south to Cuba; but she refused to go with them, and was left with her Chicago relatives.

Yukona Cameron

Now on her own, the youngest of the Camerons decided on a stage career, her first work being on the concert stage. She entered RKO vaudeville as prima donna in stage presentations. Al Trahan saw and liked her and offered her a chance to go with him as headline vaudeville attraction. She took the job.

FLYING STARS IN NEWS FILM

The latest Hearst Metrotone News, now showing at Loew's State this week, is replete with interesting scenes from all parts of the world. Starting off with several interesting views of the famous aviators, Jackson and O'Brine, in their record-breaking endurance flight, the camera shifts to Briarcliff, New York, where several outstanding diving stars put on a spectacular exhibition of high and fancy dives.

The India disturbance once again finds its way on the screen. This time thousands of youngsters are shown in a boycott parade against British goods, prompted by their elders. The young girls are also shown being taught how to spin in order that all clothing may be made at home. The fine lines of Thomas Lipton's latest challenger, Shamrock V, can be seen as it is towed into New London, while Capt. Hawkes is snapped as he lands at Curtis Field. L. I., after the fastest flight across the continent. The last shot is particularly interesting and at times amusing. It shows the lumberman of the Northwest displaying their log-rolling ability to the amusement and edification of hundreds of on-lookers.

MISS COLBERT HEADS CAST

Claudette Colbert, Paramount film star, featured in "Manslaughter," new film at the Metropolitan tomorrow, is bi-lingual—she speaks English and French with equal fluency.

The feminine lead of "Manslaughter" was born in Paris, but when only six years old, her parents brought her to the United States. At that time, she did not speak a word of English. The public schools soon taught her.

However, so that she would not lose the use of her native French, Miss Colbert's parents insisted that she speak French at home.

"Children," says Miss Colbert, "can learn to speak a foreign language without an accent. Older persons seldom can. My father and mother recognized that and never would speak English to me at home. They knew I would immitate their French accent unconsciously. In this same way, at school I imitated the accent of my playmates."

Hale in Recital at Berkshire Playhouse

Richard Hale, who has been a member of the acting company of the Berkshire Playhouse, in Stockbridge, this summer, will give a song recital at the Playhouse next Sunday evening. A baritone of recognized ability, Hale gained distinction as a singer long before he turned to the dramatic stage, but it is as an actor that he has become known to the Berkshire community.

GOULD TRAINS SCOLLAY ACT

Dave Gould

Mr. Gould is perhaps the youngest director in the country who can boast of having produced such a wide variety of dance routines. He started in show business some 15 years ago at the age of 13. He has been on the stage in tabloid shows, vaudeville and musical comedy. He played a comedy role with Ben Blue in the act of Blue and Gould, which met with great success. He played a great part in entertaining the boys "Over There" during the World War, and when he came back he opened a dance studio in New York which today is one of the busiest "factory of dances" in the country.

He is very proud of his eight "Scollayettes," for the girls were personally selected by him 16 weeks ago, for all-round dancing ability. In the space of 16 weeks, the girls have put on some 60 distinct dance routines.

BEAUTY HINTS FROM JOAN PEERS

Joan Peers, young star who plays the feminine lead in "Rain or Shine," Columbia production now showing at the new B. F. Keith's, has hints for women on beauty.

"Facial massages serve as circulation stimulators," she says. "They keep the skin clear and fresh looking. However, there is a way of doing it so that it brings the best possible results. The proper way to quickly bring up a supply of blood to the face is not to massage the face but to massage the neck and shoulders vigorously.

"A correct facial treatment makes the skin soft and pliable and prevents premature wrinkles and promotes the elimination of waste matter from the skin by stimulating the functions of the sweat and oil glands. The muscles are strengthened and kept from sagging by means of massage, and the arteries and veins are stimulated so that pure blood is brought to the parts that are manipulated and waste matter is forced to leave the tissues and is carried away by the veins.

"After the circulation is stimulated, then the cleaning process should begin. Cream the face thoroughly, applying it with rotary motions. Remove the cream with cleansing tissues. The final step should be the application of some sort of an astringent."

EX-BOXERS IN FILM BATTLE

Five ex-prize fighters were obtained by Radio Pictures to add realism to a "free-for-all" fight in pool hall scenes in Richard Dix's latest starring vehicle, "Shooting Straight" at the Keith-Albee.

They are William "Sailor" Vincent, former champion welterweight of the Pacific coast and United States Navy; Nate Slott, champion featherweight of middle-western states for a number of years; Willie Keeler, heavyweight; George McGrill, welterweight and Walter Robbins, fighter and champion bulldogger of steers.

'LITTLE SHOW' HELD OVER

"The Second Little Show" is being held over at the Wilbur for a third week, which postpones the New York opening until Tuesday, September 2. This is Boston's gain, for the smart revue has won favor with the last fortnight's audiences, especially its head man, Al Trahan.

An addition to the cast is Jay C. Flippen, who gives a specialty monologue and takes part in the sketches. He takes Joe Lewis' place, with Joe going into night club work. Several sketches have been added along with new material and songs.

IRISH COLLEEN IS STARRED BY FOX

Hollywood moves in a mysterious way its wonders to perform, and many a head that wears the crown of stardom today finds itself decapitated overnight. And thus it comes to pass that a certain young star, who a few months ago was riding on the crest of the silver lined cloud, now finds herself on the outside of the office of one of the big movie units, while an attractive little Irish colleen, unheard of a year ago, is now being groomed for the place but recently occupied by the demoted star.

The star is none other than Janet Gaynor, and her successor is Maureen O'Sullivan, discovered by Frank Borzage while making the original shots for the John McCormack "Song O' My Heart," which, by the way, is to be shown in Boston for the first time at popular prices early next month, when it comes to the Olympia and Uptown theaters.

Miss O'Sullivan not only won her place in the American talkies in the McCormack picture, but later in the supporting company of Will Rogers in "So This Is London" added to her laurels. And now the Fox studios are featuring her in the leading feminine role of "Just Imagine," the DeSylvia, Brown and Henderson musical soon to be released, and as co-star with Charles Farrell in a big release called "The Princess and the Plumber."

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

Sergt. Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. didn't blush a bit when he called on Mr. Boston today and told the veteran he was going to use ladies as ushers at his boxing shows.

"I have just inserted an ad in all of the Boston newspapers seeking refined, capable, competent girls to usher at my boxing shows", declared the Sergeant. "I want to have the fair sex on the job when Babe Hunt and Ernie Schaaf clash at Fenway Park on September 2.

Jack Conway

"We have women aviators, women taxi drivers, women lawyers and women doctors. Why not women ushers at boxing shows?

"I don't think the ladies will accept 25 and 50 cent bribes from birds who crash the gate and then want a seat in the first five rows.

"I have not been satisfied with the ushering at any of the Boston clubs with which I have been connected. The same condition also exists in New York and in the other big boxing centers.

"I know plenty of fans who jam their way into seats for which somebody else has paid. Ringside patrons are often insulted when they ask for the seat called for by their ticket. We'll see if the ladies can eliminate this evil.

"The Athletics use ladies as ushers and this system has proved successful. It should also work out all right at boxing shows."

"I must give you credit for pulling new ideas in the boxing game," declared Mr. Boston. "Damon Runyon recently told me that in his opinion you were the best boxing promoter in the United States. Wait until he hears about the lady ushers. Wow!"

Big Boy Rawson Back in the Fistic Picture

Big Boy Rawson is going to swing back into the boxing picture, according to information furnished Mr. Boston by Major Billy Lynch of South Boston.

"Rawson will take on George Gemas at Franklin, N. H., tonight," said Lynch. "I have had Big Boy working out with Con O'Kelley at Kelley & Hayes' Gym and he is ready to step into the ring and give a good account of himself.

"I don't believe anybody will question Rawson's ability to hit. Most of his trouble has been due to lack of physical condition. He is training properly for the first time in his career."

Carnera and Maloney go Planned for Boston

Dan Carroll called Mr. Boston on the telephone.

"I am dickering for bouts for Jim Maloney with Primo Carnera and Max Schmeling," said Dan. "Eddie Mack wants the Carnera bout. I have agreed to sign if Mack can line up Carnera. This bout would draw between $100,000 and $150,000.

"If Maloney meets Schmeling, the tussle will be staged in Berlin. Max feels he has not been treated fairly in this country, and prefers boxing in Germany. Maloney will grab a bout anytime Schmeling tips Joe Jacobs to sign on the dotted line.

"Jeff Dickson will be the promoter if Shamus collides with Schmeling."

Jim Dandy's Victory Helps the Bookmakers

Mr. Boston's attention has been called to the fact that bookmakers report increased business as a result of the sensational win of Jim Dandy over Gallant Fox and Whichone.

"Now that Jim Dandy won at 100 to 1, you may expect to find many small bettors playing the long shots," said Mr. Boston. "It is the dream of every race track follower to cash in on a long shot. Over a period of years most of the cashing in is done by the bookmakers."

Mrs. Ferris Leads With Card of 87

Marion, Aug. 20—Mrs. W. M. Ferris, Jr., turned in the best gross score in the annual women's invitation tournament conducted by the Kittansett Club here yesterday with a card of 87 which was three strokes better than the 90 credited to Mrs. E. C. Stone, who had the second best gross score.

Aided by a handicap of 22, Mrs. J. P. Stearns, with 101, carried off the best net honors with an 82. Mrs. Ferris, with a handicap of four, had the second best net, 83.

Thirty-five contestants turned in cards at the end of the day's play, and it is anticipated that an equal number will take part today, the last day of the tournament.

TILDEN BEATS SUTTER IN FIVE SETS

Newport, R. I., Aug .20 (INS)—Proving that he still was able to overcome stiff opposition despite a game leg, Big Bill Tilden today swept into the quarter finals of the 14th annual tournament for the Casino singles tennis cup when he defeated Clifford Sutter of New Orleans in five hard-fought sets.

In the match that went 53 games, Tilden, in quest of his eighth victory of the coveted trophy, defeated Sutter, the Tulane University and intervollegiate champion, by scores of 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, 2—6, 8—6.

It was against Sutter that Tilden was pitted at Rye, N. Y., when he walked off the court when spectators heckled him. Sutter, seeded ninth in the present tournament, had gone on to win the Rye games.

The tall Philadelphian apparently did not try very hard to win the fourth set, which would have given him the match. But calling upon all he had he pulled the fifth set out of the fire when it seemed sure he would be defeated.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex, seeded third, also advanced to the quarter finals, at the expense of E. R. Avory of England in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4, 6—1.

George Lott Eliminates Keith Gledhill

Just behind Allison came George M Lott, r., of Chicago, 23-year-old member of the United States Davis Cup team, seeded just below Tilden, who eliminated Keith Gledhill of Santa Monica, Cal. Like Allison, Lott won in straight sets, 6—1, 6—2, 6—4. At no time did Gledhill threaten.

Another Westerner went by the boards when Ed Jacobs of Portland, Ore., bowed to Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., but not until he had made a stiff fight. Mangin was leading two sets in a row, when Jacobs tied it at two all by winning the next two sets. The final scores were 6—4, 6—3, 6—8, 5—7, 6—2.

The veteran Francis T. Hunter of New York, Tilden's doubles partner, gave a tennis lesson to Wilbur Coen of Kansas City, Tilden's protege, when he eliminated the youngster, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4, 7—5.

The last foreign invader, F. J. Perry of England, fell before the hard game of Johnny Van Ryn of Orange, N. J., who won a four-set match, 6—2, 7—5, 6—8, 6—3.

FARRELL'S 68 LEADS IN WEST

Indianwood Golf Club, Orion, Mich., Aug. 20 (AP)—Johnny Farrell of New York whizzed over the Indianwood course with a brilliant 68, four under par, to take the lead in the Western open 18-hole qualifying round today.

The former National Open champion bagged three birdies and one eagle, going out in 33 and coming back in 35. His eagle came on the 460-yard first hole. He went out one stroke over par on but one hole, the 420-yard sixth.

Goslin Hits Three Homers in One Game

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 — Goose Goslin equalled the world's record of hitting three home runs in one game and on successive times at bat, as St. Louis took the final of the three-game series with the Athletics here by a score of 7 to 0.

Tony Blacholder blanked the world's champions with five hits.

Goslin hit his first home run off Rube Walberg in the fifth inning. In the seventh he hit his second off Eddie Rommel and in the ninth his third, the last with one man on base and accounting for his fifth run driven in. All of Goslin's smashes were hard blows over the right field fence.

Hopedales Beaten by Hyde Park, 10-2

Hyde Park stopped the mad surge of the Hopedale club of Allston by pounding the ball all over the lot to hang a 10-to-2 defeat onto the second half leaders at Smith Playground, Allston, last night, in a Hub Twilight League encounter.

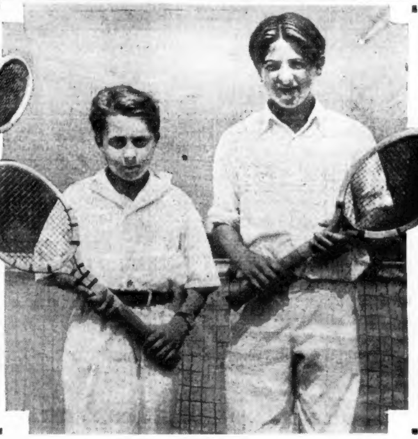
FUTURE TILDENS TUNE UP AT NEWTON CENTER COURTS

CAPT. ROBERT VOLPE, the best player on the Newton Center playground tennis team. Volpe has yet to meet defeat in a title match.



DOUBLES TEAM THAT REPRESENTS the Newton Center playground is composed of little Billy Babcock and Nick Ciccone. They are younger than their team-mates but do not lack a great deal in ability. Young Babcock spends all his time at the Longwood Cricket Club where he watches his idols whom he hopes to emulate in the near future.

Newton Center Team Wins Playground Tennis Title

Newton Center playground tennis team won the court title of the Newton playgrounds by its victory yesterday over Burr playground, at Newton Center.

Two of the Burr team were away, so two of the five matches scheduled were defaulted to Newton Center. The Newton team won a doubles match and two singles matches, bringing its total for the year to 43 wins and two defeats.

Bob Volpe, captain of the team, is one of the best of the young tennis players of Greater Boston. In his matches this summer in the playground league he was unbeaten. John Fitzgerald, one of the members of the Newton high tennis team, gave Volpe his stiffest opposition.

Volpe enters Newton high this fall, and should be one of the members of the Garden City team, if he continues to improve as he has in the past season. He has a good command of all tennis shots and is very fast.

Wilson Equals N. L. Home Run Record

Chicago, Aug. 20—The Phils took the first game of a double-header from the Cubs by the score of 9 to 8 and played 16 innings of a second game, only to have the game called on account of darkness with the score tied at 6 all.

Wilson hit his 43rd homer of the season in the opener, tying the National League mark set last year by Chuck Klein and coming to within one homer of Babe Ruth.

Western Union Nine Beats Firemen, 11-10

The Western Union baseball nine held a one-run lead for five innings to overcome the Boston fire department, Engine 50 of Charlestown, at Sullivan sq. yesterday. Both teams hit heavy with few errors.

Cohasset clinched the South Shore golf championship yesterday by defeating the second-place Hatherly outfit, 8½ to 3½.

As a result of this defeat and the overwhelming victories of South Shore and Crow Point, Hatherly dropped to fourth place. South Shore and Crow Point, Hatherly dropped to fourth place. South Shore conquered Scituate, 11 to 1, while Crow Point won from the last-place Duxbury Club, 10½ to 1½.

In the other match, Plymouth gained an easy victory over Marshfield, 10 to 2, at Plymouth.

Cohasset had an unexpectedly easy day in defeating the neighboring outfit. Bean had the best medal score, 74, while his teammate, Bush, was right behind him, with 75. Rowey of Hatherly had 76.

SOUTH BOSTON PLAYS REVERE

There will be only one game in the Hub Twilight League tonight but it is one of the best that could possibly be booked, with Revere meeting South Boston at Paul Revere Park, Revere.

Revere is threatening to overhaul the Hopedales of Allston for the Hub leadership. They started off fast in the second half and won five in a row but then slumped.

The entry from the beach is anxious to overtake the Hopedales and to get into the playoffs. They're playing the second of five games in a row this evening and will get a big boost towards their objective by a victory.

Markey in Quarter Finals at Washington

Washington, Aug. 20 (AP)—Thomas Markey of Indianapolis advanced to the quarter finals of the eighth annual public parks tennis tournament today with a straight set victory over Robert Hall of Louisville, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0.

George Jennings of Chicago, defending singles champion, entered the semi-finals by defeating J. C. Miller of Birmingham, 6—2, 6—3, 6—0.

Ted Drewes of St. Louis, four-time winner of the singles championship, entered the quarter finals by eliminating Leo Kronman of Buffalo in straight sets, 63, 6—2, 6—3.

Monte Tiller of Louisville was eliminated by Dooly Mitchell of Washington, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

Robert Considine, second entry from Washington defeated the remaining entry from Buffalo, Edward Nowak. The scores were, 6—3, 6—2, 7—5.

M'Larnin-Singer Bout Will Draw $250,000 Gate

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, Aug. 20 (INS)—Jimmy McLarnin and Al Singer, it was estimated today, hard upon the closing of this big-little fight of the year, will gross a gate of $250,000 when they heave at each other here on September 11, which, if true, will mean that a golden harvest moon will shine over boxing's left shoulder for the first time in months.

It will mean, for instance, that the fighters will get about $75,000 apiece out of it. The Garden Corporation likewise will get considerable more than its usual haircut money out of it and, from the way the matter shapes up, it looks as though the muggs might be pleasantly astounded by getting a prize fight out of it.

However, all I get out of it is the impression that a self-respecting pugilist nowadays wouldn't be caught holding a world's championship, even for a friend.

Business Elsewhere Fighters Have

The McLarnin-Singer fight is all right. Both are fast boxers and good hitters and the man who decides to stay away may live to regret it. But both of these bright young men would seem to have business elsewhere.

McLarnin, for instance, is the ranking challenger in the welterweight class. Is he plaintively challenging Jack Thompson, the champion? Not so Jack Thompson or anybody can notice it. He simply isn't interested in any fight, even for the title, except at his price. McLarnin, in brief, is willing to let Thompson keep the title. He, meantime, will keep the $75,000 purses.

On the other hand, Jackie Kid Berg is the qualified challenger in the lightweight class and they tried to make him go on with Singer before they sanctioned the McLarnin match. Singer and Berg are a couple of boys who stand well with the buttonhole trade and would have done better than $175,000 fighting for the title.

But Jackie, the Kid, had too much presence of mind for them. He wasn't the man to take a lot of trouble in working himself up to where he is just to have a lot of malcontents force him into a championship and thus spoil everything.

So Singer and McLarnin are to go on to their estimated $250,000 gate, meaning that the promoters will take $180,000 and no questions asked, while Berg will continue as the persistent challenger, hence preserving his standing with everybody.

In fact, the only party who figures to lose anything by the deal is Tony Canzoneri, who will fight Singer for the title later in the year, and all Tony will lose is the prize fight.

In other words, the boys seem to have arrived at a great truth, namely, that a world's championship is a unique distinction; but you can't eat it.

COLLEGE BOYS LEADING A FAST LIFE

THE ENTRIES IN THE intercollegiate outboard event at Red Bank, N. J., are shown getting away to a flying start in the recent annual national motorboat championships. This event was won by Willis Overton of Norwalk, Ct., in his "Saugatuck Also." The hydroplane escort is having a hard time keeping up with the speedy craft. (International Newsreel photo.)

Newton went into a tie for first place with Allston in the Hub Twilight League by defeating Somerville City Club, 9 to 2, while Hyde Park trounced the Hopedales, 10 to 2. St. Augustine shut out Mt. Hope 6 to 0, and Jamaica tied Revere 5 to 5.

Hyde Park made three double plays and hammered Manix for 14 hits. Freddy Weiners of St. Augustine restricted Mt. Hope to five singles and contributed a home run himself.

Felix Talbot of Stone & Webster made his debut with Jamaica and hammered out a double in the 5 to 5 tie with Revere. Johnny Proctor connected for two triples and a single in the barrage of 15 hits which Newton threw against Somerville.

PRESIDENT OF A. L. THINKS IT O. K. FOR MINORS

By JOE CASHMAN

Night baseball will never be tried by either major league, in the opinion of President Ernest Barnard of the American League, who is paying a flying visit to the Hub.

On the other hand, the "prexy" admits that the night game has proved a life-saver for several minor league teams this season, and that it is here to stay as far as the small circuits are concerned.

Joe Cashman

"I have seen a lot of night baseball this season," he told us today, "and I am convinced that it is a fine thing for the minor leagues.

"However, I think it would hurt rather than help the major leagues to try playing under artificial light, and I am certain that they will never attempt the experiment.

"Most minor league teams are supported by fans who work during the day. The only time these people can attend a game is on a Sunday, a holiday, a day off or at night.

"So, naturally, the teams that are playing in the evening are enjoying unprecedented prosperity. When the novelty of the thing wears off, they won't draw so well as they have to date, but they figure to keep right on getting bigger crowds and making more money than they ever did when they confined their playing to afternoons."

Night Games Would Not Help Majors, Says Barnard.

"Conditions are different, though, in the big cities. Major league clubs can attract enough vacationists, night-workers and visitors to afternoon games to pay expenses.

"If these teams played at night, they would get a lot of new customers who are unable to attend very often during the day but they would lose a lot of their present support.

"They might even do better financially by playing in the evening but it is just as likely that they would not do so well, and if they tried the stunt and had to shift back, many of the former patrons would probably be lost to baseball for good.

"Major league magnates, each of whom has a large fortune invested in the sport, can't afford to take that kind of a gamble.

"The minors have everything to gain and nothing to lose by playing at night, so they are in favor of it.

"The majors would have everything to lose and nothing to gain by making the change, so they are against it and won't do it."

Baseball Suffering From Business Depression

The "prexy" also contradicted the rumors that the major leagues aren't prospering this season and that the St. Louis franchise may be shifted to another city.

"The general business depression through the country has hit baseball the same as everything else," he said, "but it has hurt baseball far less than any other big business.

"More people have attended American League games to date than during the same period last year.

"The big lead the Philadelphia Athletics have piled up has killed the interest in most cities

Over 400 Boys Will Tee Off in Hearst Golf Tourney

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

FREE-FOR-ALL BATTLE IS EXPECTED

With the stage all set for one of the greatest junior golfing events in the history of New England, the William Randolph Hearst tournament, which starts at Wollaston Golf Club on Monday, more than 400 youngsters are practicing daily at surrounding clubs, full of hope and ambition to win one of the many beautiful prizes that are being offered.

Many of the probable winners of the Hearst found a chance to tune up in the caddy tournament at Woodland and, from the golf shown in that battle, there is likely to be a free-for-all at Wollaston with 50 or more of the entrants able to shoot under 80.

New England is likely to find a future champion or another Bobby Jones in the Hearst tournament. The cream of the youthful golfers in this section of the land are entered and the Wollaston course will test their skill. The lad who wins the Hearst will have to have exceptional ability, courage and endurance.

Wollaston Course in Excellent Shape

Another 100 entries have been received by boys since the entries were closed. But it is not possible to accept these for the field is so large at present that it is going to be a long, arduous job to put this throng through the qualifying round.

The Wollaston course is being put in perfect shape for the arrival of the large army of linksmen who'll tee off on Monday morning. All details have been tended to and nothing can prevent this tournament from being a huge success.

Those golfers who got their entries in before closing time will have to get a copy of Saturday's Boston Evening American in which the starting times will be published.

It is extremely important that they find out what time they are due to tee off and to be on hand at the time appointed. Otherwise they may be ruled out of the tournament.

NIGHT GAMES NOT FAVORED

by now, and I don't expect the total attendance for the season will be as great as last year, but it won't be very much less.

"I don't know anything about the National League, but with three clubs battling for the flag I would imagine that the senior circuit would do a lot more business than in '29.

"Attendance has been quite poor in St. Louis all year but there is no truth to the rumors that the American League franchise may leave the Mound City.

Ball Can't Transfer St. Louis Franchise

"I don't think Owner Phil Ball has ever contemplated such a move. If he has, it won't do him any good, for he must obtain the unanimous consent of all the other American League club owners, as well as a majority of those in the National League before he can go elsewhere with the team.

Suarez Greatest Since Kid Lavigne, Says Igoe

By HYPE IGOE.

New York, Aug. 20 (INS)—Justo Suarez, the Buenos Aires Buzzsaw, mowed our gallant Bruce Flowers down here last night as if he had been a bed o' tulips—ripped and cuffed and clouted the dashing Negro into utter collapse in 1:05 of the sixth round.

It was a pitiful ending for a fellow who had withstood the hardest fists in this country at 135 pounds.

Suarez is a great fighter. I don't think there is a lightweight in the world who can whip any part of him. His up-snorting style his Ketchel-like shifting is devastating.

Flowers nailed Suarez plump on the chin with a harder right than he landed on Tommy Grogan's chin two weeks ago. The Argentine shook his mane, squinted his black eyes until they almost disappeared, bared his even white teeth in a vicious snarl, and went back into the thick of it.

Flowers went down twice for counts of nine before the final crumpling. He simply wasn't a match for this little demon from the pampas land. I'd like to know who is.

I thought that Jackie Berg was a little savage in action. He is meek beside this Spanish speaking kid. I haven't seen such a terror since Kid Lavigne used to rip their ribs loose from the moorings.

McGRAIL WINS CADDY TITLE

Harold McGrail of The Country Club yesterday won the caddy championship of Massachusetts at the Woodland Golf Club. Two fine rounds of 78 and 76 for a total of 154 was three strokes better than the round shot by John Quinn of Chestnut Hill, the runner-up.

McGrail has been considered the past two years one of the outstanding in the bag toting profession. In fact, he was hailed as favorite the past two meetings.

Last season McGrail was the runner-up and the year before that he finished third. Considering this trio of efforts, therefore, the impression is indelibly left that Harold is of the unusual. Seldom does one individual hammer for recognition consecutively and then breeze through.

Peter Bukin, the morning leader with a 76, tossed opportunity away in this stretch by taking an 88 and John Kelly of Brae Burn had the same experience.

Here's how the first 10 finished.

Harold McGrail, The Country	78	76—154
John Quinn, Chestnut Hill	80	77—157
Joe Looney, Arlmont	78	81—159
James Flattery, North Shore	81	79—160
Charles Pickering, Wollaston	84	76—160
Marin Zobbi, Plymouth	81	79—160
Edward Martin, Waltham	79	83—162
Leo Martin, Waltham	84	79—163
John Kelley, Brae Burn	78	85—163
Joseph Carew, Winchester	80	83—163

Sylph Winner at Eastern Point

Gloucester, Aug. 20—The Cape Cod knockabout class at Eastern Point resumed racing in the series for the junior championship and Frank Cunningham's Sylph was the winner.

The fleet was sent over the harbor course in a light easterly wind, which gave them a spinnaker run to the breakwater spar, a beat back to Niles flag buoy, a run back to the breakwater and a beat to the finish line.

CYCLING DERBY AT REVERE

One of the most colorful bike classics of the season, the Cycling Derby, will draw a large number of fans of every nationality to the Revere Cyvle track next Saturday night.

Before the race each rider circles the track once bearing the flag of his nation, while a band renders the national anthem of that country.

The Derby will be the longest race of the season at Revere, covering 62½ miles. It also has the largest field, consisting of seven riders.

George Chapman, Frank Keenan and Charley Jaeger will carry the Stars and Stripes, Frank Georgetti the Italian flag, Franz Duelberg the German flag, Al LeTournier the French flag and Caesar Debaets the Belgian.

The first six riders are in the championship series and put up a thrilling race in the Bol D'or feature two weeks ago. Debaie has been traveling, but has shown some very fast riding in other sections.

There will be a special sprint match of three one-mile heats between Charley Ritter and Cecil Walker and also a tandem race to complete a thrilling program.

SONNENBERG IN HYANNIS BOUT

By RINGSIDE

Gus Sonnenberg, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, has been signed to meet Stanley Pinto in a finish wrestling bout at the Mill Hill Arena, Hyannis, on Friday night.

This will be the second meeting between these men. In their last tussle, Sonnenberg won after 1 hour 26 minutes of wrestling in a contest staged at Manchester, N. H.

Bibber McCoy will tackle Frank Yusko in the semifinal.

Matchmaker Alex MacLean of the Boston Garden has booked Buddy Howard of New Haven, national amateur champion of two years ago, to collide with Jack Dudley, diamond belt heavyweight champion, in an eight-round bout at Braves Field on next Tuesday night.

Steve Gorman of South Boston and Terry Mitchell of Somerville will meet in another eight. These boys recently staged a punching duel at Braves Field.

Ug Gibson of Medford will mingle with Pat O'Flaherty of South Boston in the third eight rounder.

Henry Lamar and Marty Gallagher, who clash in the feature 10-round bout, have opened training quarters in Boston.

Tony Shucco, North End welterweight, will have Homer Roberton as an opponent in an eight-round bout at a Cycle A. C. show at Revere on Friday night.

In six-round bouts Orson Record, Charlestown, will battle Paul Zeramby, South Boston; Johnny Bacon, Quincy, will tackle George Perry, Revere; while Young Janino, Revere, will mingle with Johnny Gallo, East Boston.

Jack McCarthy and Harry Allen will end training today for their ten-round bout which will be staged at Brockton tomorrow night. Allen recently won a decision over McCarthy in a close bout at Brockton. Allen later stopped Babe McCorgary at Braves Field.

Wins Two Decisions in the Same Evening

Chicago, Aug. 20 (AP)—Andy Shanks, Grand Rapids, Mich., heavyweight, today figured he should be credited with two victories over Jack McAuliffe of Detroit for one evening's work.

Shanks knocked out McAuliffe from the ring in the first round of a 10-rounder at the Congress Arcade Arena last night. The Detroit heavy finally got back into the inclosure, but Referee Johnny Behr had counted him out. The crowd yelled for more fight and Shanks consented, after protest, to try it again.

A low right-hand blow by McAuliffe hurt Shanks so that the latter could not continue, and he was awarded the fight on a foul in the third.

MIDGE MORRILL STARRING AT FOREST HILLS

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 20 (INS)—Tall, blonde, pretty, jolly—that's the description of America's next woman's national tennis champion, if Marjorie "Midge" Morrill continues at the speed she showed here yesterday in trouncing Clara Louise Zinke in love sets in her tournament debut.

Ranked but eleventh in the national listings, the Bay State girl was nevertheless placed at No. 2 in the draw by the tournament officials, who were prompted to honor her in this manner by the impressive string of wins she ran up in the early weeks of the summer season.

And Midge is sure doing her best to live up to the officials' opinion of her abilities.

So impressive, indeed, was Miss Morrill's victory that she has usurped the position of Mrs. Lawrence Harper as favorite among the American contenders for the singles laurels. And if she continues her fast pace against Dorothy Workman today, and Ethel Burkhardt and Sarah Palfrey in the next two rounds she will enter her semi-final match with Betty Nuthall a favorite to conquer the British girl.

Dorothy Workman Is Miss Morrill's Opponent

Dorothy Workman should prove little more than a warm-up for the mighty Midge. Ethel Burkhardt, eighth ranking American player, who must first dispose of Virginia Rice today, will probably put Miss Morrill to a stiffer test when they clash tomorrow.

Betty Nuthall anticipates little difficulty getting by her own third round match today against Edith Cross, the third ranking American player. The Frisco girl has gone way back this summer.

Another girl who has changed surprisingly since her return from England and who faces a difficult assignment today is Sarah Palfrey, last year's darling of the gallery.

Sarah, too, seems to have been affected adversely by the trip abroad, and unless she can suddenly find her form of 1929 again, there is every reason to believe she will be beaten by Dorothy Weisel, the diminutive California Miss.

Falmouth Beats Harwich, 12 to 4

Harwich, Aug. 20—Falmouth hit Fitzgerald and Shatzer hard to win by a score of 12 to 4. Walsh Camarano and Fisher starred at bat for Falmouth, and Manning and Gill for Harwich.

Shatzer of Harwich made one of the longest hits yet seen at Brooks Park, a deep drive to center field, duplicating Demille's feat of yesterday.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Harold McGrail and Johnny Quinn are again back in good standing in the "Settlement," for these Chestnut Hill boys finished one-two in the caddie championship at Woodland yesterday.

Roger Farwell, who is far more of an asset to his club than he has ever been given credit for, predicts that there will be more than 300 tee off during the three days of the Sandy Burr open next week.

Brice S. Evans is trying to uncover every southpaw golfer in New England for the fifth annual left hand golf championship which will start the Wednesday after Labor Day at the Wollaston Golf Club. Every southpaw in New England is extended a cordial invitation to battle for the crown now in the possession of Grif Fallon.

In order to encourage the mediocre left-handers, a special 18-hole handicap tournament will be held in conjunction with the qualifying round for which net prizes will be offered. Consequently, it is up to every kethogue to help out the portsiders' championship.

While the open tournament players are fighting for the ten prizes donated by the Sandy Burr Country Club at Wayland next week, the Abenaqui Golf Club of Rye Beach, N. H. will be celebrating its 22nd annual medal and match play classic.

The winner of this tournament will receive a trophy and will score one win on the Abenaqui Trophy, presented by Col. George M. Studebaker and Clement Studebaker, Jr.

If the Eastward Ho committee succeeds in getting Johnny Farrell, the former United States open champion, to play in the Cape Cod championship, it will result in the establishment of that event as one of the top notch classics ever held in New England, other than national and open title events.

Joe Turnesa, the Bay State open champion, Tommie Kerrigan and Gene Sarazen will be at Eastward Ho for the Cape Cod championship, as will Francis Ouimet, Freddie Wright and Jesse Sweetser, the former British amateur champion.

With practically every junior golfer of note in New England entered in the second William Randolph Hearst championship, the competition for the title will be the keenest in the annals of junior golf in this country.

Tommie Quinn, who featured in the Massachusetts junior championship at Belmont Spring, is spending a two weeks' vacation in New Hampshire and therefore passed up the caddie championship. Tommie will be home for the Hearst next Monday at Wollaston.

In fairness to the caddies who competed at Woodland yesterday there was less "cribbing" this year than during any of the previous caddie championships. To a great extent caddies acquire the "cribbing" habit from the members of their clubs and not being mature enough to realize exactly how serious such practices are, they fall into a habit which starts them off on the wrong foot.

GIANTS MOVE TO 2ND PLACE

St Louis, Aug. 20 — The New York Giants shoved the Brooklyn Robins out of second place yesterday by taking a hard-fought game from the Cardinals, 4 to 2, while Brooklyn was losing to Pittsburgh.

The Giants scored three runs in the second inning, then held off the Cardinal assaults by good fielding and some steady pitching in the late innings by Carl Hubbell.

Hubbell drove in the first two Giant runs with a single coming up after Ott and Hogan had started the inning with singles and Roettger had been purposely passed. Critz's sacrifice sent in the third tally. The fourth Giant run was scored in the seventh on doubles by Leach and Lindstrom.

St. Louis tallied in the third and threatened to take the lead in the fourth but was held to a single run as fine throws to the plate by Ott and Roettger cut off counters. The Cards made three hits and received two walks in this frame.

Roche Club Holds Mahoneys to Tie

The Roche Club of Everett held the fast-stepping William J. Mahoney nine of Roxbury to a 4-4 tie at Glendale Park, Everett, last night, in a thrilling contest.

McCarthy hurled good ball for the Mahoneys, allowing but five hits to the strong Roche Club. The Mahoneys gathered eight blows. Chris Cutler, former Commerce High star, now at B. C., made his debut with the Mahoneys by getting two out of three hits and playing a fast game in the garden.

The Mahoney Club will entertain the Somerville Progressives at Shirley st. on Friday night and meet the Neponset Wanderers in a return game at Shirley st. on Sunday afternoon.

Wood and Hyde Go Into Fourth Round

Squirrel Island, Me., Aug. 20.— Barry Wood and "Hobey" Hyde, seeded one and two in Squirrel Island's annual tennis tournament advanced into the fourth round with little difficulty here yesterday. Wood won in straight sets, dropping only one game in his second round encounter and retiring West 6-4, 6-1, in the third-round brush.

Hyde faced some stiff opposition in his second set with Martin but pulled out to win, 6-1, 7-5. The most exciting match of the day saw Upton stage a third set comeback when trailing 3—4 and love—40 on his own delivery, to win at 11-9, 3-6, 7-5.

Betty Nuthall and Lott to Defend Doubles Title

Betty Nuthall and George Lott will defend their national mixed doubles title at Longwood beginning Wednesday, and as the first 10 in the men's national singles ranking will compete in the national men's doubles beginning Monday.

The two strongest challenging teams yet to appear are Edith Cross and Wilmer Allison and Marjorie Gladman and her fiance John Van Ryn. In addition to the Boston entry of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Hill, Jr., there are two international combinations accepted. H. G. N. Lee, Cincinnati, while J. Perry, English Davis cup player this year, is teamed with Carolyn Babcock of California.

The announcement at Newport yesterday by Berkeley Bell that he would play in the national doubles with Gregory Mangin, filled in the last and missing name of the "first 10" single players who will be playing tandem at Longwood next week. Tilden, No. 1, plays with Hunter, No. 2; Doeg, No. 3, with Lott, No. 4; Van Ryn, No. 5, with Allison, No. 7; Mercur, No. 6, with Hall, No. 13; Bell, No. 9, with Mangin [illegible]

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON,
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

In the putting stroke, as outlined previously, you may have let your eyes wander forward just enough to follow after the ball as it rolled. If you saw the ball during all its flight you may be certain of one thing—you moved your head. With your head anchored and kept still the ball gets well on its way before you pick it up with your eyes. On short putts—three, four, five feet—the ball often drops before you look up. This is not because you stand there and, goofy-like, look at nothing at all on the ground just to avoid looking up, but wholly because these short putts will be over with, and the ball in the cup, before you actually have finished your putting stroke and can call your muscles into action required for looking forward after the ball. The ball, stroked thus, runs truly because your head has really kept still.

THE PORT OF BOSTON IN REVIEW

By CARL MORRISON

The recent maiden voyage of the Kinai Maru to Boston was a step forward in the development of the port.

This trip was the first of a [illegible] 14-day Boston-Orient service hailed as one of the fastest of its kind in the world. The voyage to New York from Japan took 26 days.

The Maru ship, represented here by John G. Hall & Co., is the last word in modernity. She is a [illegible] engined motorship, with electric cargo winches, special rooms for silk shipments, four refrigerated rooms for eggs and fish, and [illegible] for chemicals and deep tanks for oils.

This new semi-monthly [illegible] shows an evidence of [illegible] future expansion of New England exports to the Far East [illegible] cargo to the Hub but the [illegible] of exports must keep [illegible] boosters.

WALSH ON SHIPPING

The assistant postmaster general, endeavoring to boom the American Merchant Marine, recently said that only 40 per cent of U. S. shipping [illegible] in American bottoms.

Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts also reported figures of deep interest to shippers. He said that during the five years ending 1927 the United States was outbuilt in shipping by a ratio of 50 to one by Great Britain, ten to one by Germany, five to one by France and [illegible] to one by Japan.

"How can we stand still," said Sen. Walsh, "and allow the merchant marine of these countries to be built in this ratio without realizing that, outside of the question of parity, we are leaving ourselves helpless?"

Cathie Nervous, and Very Self-Conscious, Makes Awkward Plea for Job

CHAPTER 1

CATHIE PAIGE pulled the skirt of her trim tailored suit a little farther over her knees, and coaxed her hat to what she hoped was its most becoming angle. Then she fixed her eyes on the door marked "Alfred A. Farnsworth, Private," and settled herself to wait.

At least she tried to settle herself. She would sit perfectly still for 30 seconds, then she would take a furtive peek into the tan envelope purse she carried and there would be a jingle of coins, and out would come a small, round mirror and powder puff. Another dusting of powder over her nice, straight little nose, another anxious glance at the door, and another period of motionless waiting.

It was plain that she expected Alfred Farnsworth to jump out of his door at any moment, and she wanted to be looking her best when he did it. She was so intent on the door, and in preparing to make a good impression on the unseen gentleman behind it that she failed to notice that she was not alone in the room.

Success Evident

It was a large room, all solid mahogany and thick green carpet. The kind of room that says.

"I belong to a successful man. One that doesn't care much whether you sit and wait or not. You can take yourself and your affairs elsewhere if you like; we have more important things at hand."

But the other occupant of the room did not respond to its psychic message at all. He was, if anything, more arrogant, more expensively gotten up, more indifferent to public opinion than the room.

He leaned back in his chair, long legs stretched out straight ahead of him, enjoying the utmost comfort that its austere leather upholstered elegance afforded. He was a man in the late 20s, his powerful athlete's body and ruddy, bronzed complexion at variance with the perfection of his clothes. Tweed clothes of a soft, indescribable heather gray, blended into the mauve of shirt and the deeper, more purple tones of scarf and handkerchief. But if his general appearance was arrogant, there was nothing arrogant about the broad, good-natured grin that spread over his dark, acqueline features as he watched the unconscious girl.

Her First Job

A girl applying for a job, her first job, he decided. She was too young to have had many jobs, and she was too nervous, too restless for a seasoned campaigner. Not a day over 18, younger perhaps. She had the air of having dressed up in an older person's clothes. The trim blue suit and black hat were much too old for her, and yes . . . the suit was a little large . . . borrowed for the occasion, most likely!

Gordon Moore's white teeth flashed in frank enjoyment of his own detective powers. Little laughter lines appeared at each side of his shrewd, deep-set eyes. He felt a kind of kinship with the girl. He'd have liked to say, "Hello, sis!" to pull off her tight hat and rumple the fair hair squeezed under it, as he would if she were a little boy.

She looked a little like a boy, with her round necked white blouse with its black silk tie, and her slim, straight shoulders under the slightly too large suit. There was something refreshingly boyish about the faint trail of freckles over her nose, and the clarity and candor of her eyes.

They were blue eyes. The translucent flower-blue that usually belongs to childhood alone. The crinkly, goldy hair that escaped from the close black hat was really a light brown, and so were the thick lashes and brows, and the tiny trail of freckles over the bridge of her straight little nose. A cute nose, Gordon Moore decided, and a cute girl. More than that, a deuced attractive girl . . . make a wonderful woman some day . . .

She was digging in the purse again. Counting her money this time. A few nickels and coppers. Moore's amusement faded. He began to feel vaguely uncomfortable, the unwilling witness to some too realistic drama. Good Lord, the child couldn't be really up against it!

Blames Self

He watched unhappily. Did he imagine it, or was her little face pinched? And the flower blue eyes that he had thought so childish a few minutes ago now seemed old and tired. He didn't like the way she kept staring at Alfred Farnsworth's door. Supplicating. Such a young girl shouldn't need work so badly. Hadn't she any parents? What was the matter with people, sending little girls like that into strange offices? No wonder the papers were full of sordid stories about stenographers and dance hall sheiks and what not. A girl that age ought to be in school . . . damn shame.

He moved his chair so that he wouldn't have to look at her, and the girl jumped violently, and turned to stare at him, her blue eyes wide with startled embarrassment.

Moore colored slightly. Feeling a little foolish he stood up and made a jerky little bow.

"I'm sorry that I startled you," he said "I can see you thought you were alone in here, I should have coughed when you came in!"

Back came the crinkly little lines near his eyes, his white teeth flashed in his bronzed face. He was smiling and coming toward her, a hard brown hand outstretched.

Their Eyes Met

Cathie's eyes met the stranger's. Her quick glance took in his perfect clothes, his long graceful body, his thin, dark face with the aquiline nose and straight black brows.

"Somebody awfully important," she decided in a flash. And good looking. And nice. Oh, isn't he nice!"

"Will you forgive me if I promise to cough next time?" he was saying.

Instantly Cathie's lovely childish face was lit with an answering smile. When she smiled her eyes almost disappeared, and a vagrant dimple trembled at the corner of her mouth. It was a beautiful smile and one that transformed her completely. It made you think of sunlight, and bright mountain flowers.

"Oh, it's my fault!" she cried quickly, in her clear, sweet voice. "I got to thinking, and I forgot everything. So I was startled when I looked up and —and saw you," she finished a shade less brightly.

It was funny how she changed again, as the smile faded. When she smiled you forgot everything, except that she was a woman, and beautiful. And when the smile went out, there she was just a green girl in makeshift clothes.

LOMASNEY FIGHTS WIDENING PLAN

N. Y. Joins Fraud Probe Here

PROSECUTORS TO CONFER NEXT WEEK

Boston Broker to Get Hearing in Supreme Court in Brooklyn, Aug. 25

Deputy Atty.-Gen Watson Washburn of New York announced today that he would confer with Atty.-Gen Joseph E. Warner of Massachusetts in Boston on Monday relative to the cases of William L. Jarvis and Alexander L. Fink, both of this city.

Washburn was located by the Boston Evening American at Windsor, Vt., where he is spending a vacation with friends. He is head of the securities bureau attached to the attorney general's office in New York State, and for weeks has been probing stock frauds which are alleged to involve Boston operatives.

"We find we need the help of the Massachusetts authorities and in turn we have evidence which we feel will be of great assistance to Mr. Warner," said Washburn. "With a little team play we ought to clean matters up.

WITNESSES ELUSIVE

"We find that many large stock brokers who operate in New York maintain headquarters in Boston and other cities in order to avoid the penalties of the Martin Act.

"This method make our duties more difficult unless we can enlist the co-operation of States where brokers complained of maintain home offices.

"We have summonses for several important witnesses in Boston, including William L. Jarvis, head of the firm of W. L. Jarvis & Co., 80 Federal st. Process servers have been unable to locate Jarvis and some of the others.

"I expect to arrive in Boston early Monday and will spend several days investigating the Boston and New England end of cases which we are working on."

Jarvis, with two New York associates, Abner S. Werblin and Leonard J. Rollnick, has been temporarily restrained from further dealings in stocks and securities in New York.

HEARING FOR DICHTER

The case is scheduled to come before the Supreme Court in Brooklyn on August 25.

Atty.-Gen Warner today admitted that he was to confer with Deputy Atty.-Gen. Washburn.

"My office has had considerable correspondence with the bureau of securities of New York recently. I am interested in the working of the bureau of securities in New York State and have been studying how it operates in conjunction with the attorney-general's department," he said.

"In Massachusetts the bureau of securities is attached to the Department of Public Utilities, but in New York the law has given the attorney-general jurisdiction over the securities bureau. That seems to be a good plan."

DRAPER TURNS HOOVER'S WORDS ABOUT YOUTH AGAINST BUTLER

BOTH G.O.P. CANDIDATES IN TALKS

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

C[illegible] given [illegible] ment affairs by President Hoover [illegible] speech, Eben S. Draper, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator today replied to the criticism of his opponent, William M. Butler, that he is "a young man without experience in national affairs."

Appearing on the same platform [illegible]

"I have been twitted by my opponent with being 'a young man without experience in national affairs,'" he declared. "I am somewhat surprised that he should raise this issue, for let me tell you what President Hoover has said concerning his appreciation of the youth of the nation and the need to bring them into active public life.

QUOTES HOOVER'S WORDS

"In his acceptance speech President Hoover said 'To inject the spirit of youth into the spirit of our government, to bring the warmth of their enthusiasm and the flame of their idealism into the affairs of the nation is to make of American government a positive and living force, a factor for righteousness and nobility in the [illegible] of the nation.'

"The President has encouraged bringing young men into public life of the nation, for he has also appreciated that only by such a course can long and distinguished service be expected. Thus it is that you will find young men occupying high appointive offices in every department of our government today, as well as in the halls of Congress, to which they have been elected by the people."

Ret[illegible] and for [illegible] Draper [illegible]

BUTLER TALKS, TOO

Candidate Butler again dwelt on the subject of business and em[illegible] two [illegible] important ones of [illegible] stimulation.

"Tariff, taxes, the spending of public funds, the conduct of government—these are all subjects of legislation," he pointed out. "They exercise a profound influence on business and employment."

The ex-senator declared that there must be an equalization of hours and labor and working conditions. He again advocated a national 48-[illegible]w.

DEMOCRATS USE STRATEGY

Although the Democratic committees of wards 12, 19 and 21 nominated Arthur J. Coughlin, past commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, for State senator in the Sixth Suffolk district to oppose the Republican candidate, Senator Pres[illegible] Gaspar G. Bacon, the strategy of the combined groups calls for Coughlin's withdrawal following the primary.

The party leaders are hopeful of securing the consent of Michael H. Corcoran of West Roxbury later to make the real run against Bacon, who for a few days had the field to him. If after his original two Democratic opponents James W. Hayes and William H. Powderly withdrew.

The deliberations of the three [illegible] groups presided over by Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the state committee in Myers Hall Tremont Temple, were enlivened by charges from Thomas J. Giblin of Jamaica Plain, that he had been "double-crossed."

Four brothers played an important part at a wedding today when one of their number, Leo F. Cox, 185 Manthorne rd., West Roxbury, led his bride, Miss Blanche Marie Welch of 70 Newburg rd., Roslindale, to the altar at the Church of the [illegible] Name, West Roxbury.

To make the ceremony even more unusual, the couple was married by Rev. Francis X. Cox, of St. Agnes Church, Detroit, who came here especially to officiate at his younger brother's wedding. All are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Owen F. Cox, 185 Manthorne rd., West Roxbury.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Welsh of 70 Newburg st., Roslindale.

Candy Firm Owes Over $300,000: Take Action to Dissolve Attachments in California

Liabilities are stated as more than $300,000 and assets as $200,000. A list of creditors will be appended within 10 days.

This action was taken on decision of the voting stockholders, Otis Emerson Dunham and Henry J. Shaw, the former voting 2000 shares and the latter, as treasurer, 4000 shares of treasury stock. Alice Dunham, as clerk and a director, also participated in the meeting.

A reorganization of the company is underway but, according to an announcement, it was deemed advisable to file the bankruptcy petition in order to dissolve attachments placed against the corporation in California.

Atty. Hugh D. McLellan was appointed receiver for the company by the Superior Court in June on petition of a minority stockholder who sought to recover for the benefit of the corporation $75,000 allegedly paid to Raymond D. Holland as a bonus in connection with the sale of Class A stock of the company.

This minority stockholder, James R. Murdock of Raynham, also sought to reach $975,000 alleged to have been received by Isaac Hart and Joseph Pollay as bonuses in connection with the sale of stocks.

Dunham, Hart, Pollay and Holland and a number of others are under indictment for alleged irregularities in connection with sale of the securities and will be tried in Superior Court at East Cambridge in October.

Senate Campaign Fund Probers Here

Senatorial "under cover" agents are in Boston to investigate "slush fund" charges hurled two weeks ago in the Republican senatorial campaign, it was learned today.

This was revealed by Sen. Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, who returned from a vacation trip. Nothing has been revealed to warrant action but the matter would be probed as a matter of form, anyway, he said.

TRIPPING THE LIGHT FANTASTIC is nothing new for His Worship, John Beasley Franklin, mayor of Waltham Cross, Eng. He has been a dancing master for 30 years and shows Kathryn Finn how it should be done. Alyce Siemens plays the accompaniment, ably assisted by Mayor Duane of Waltham, while John C. Clair looks on. The English Tercentenary visitor will give an exhibition dance at a reception in his honor, Thursday night.

BLONDES SHY IN CONTEST

town I wish the privilege of introducing you to her personally, might be mine. However, let me say that her photo does not do her justice, she is not only good to look upon, but is thoroughly good in character and every other way besides being intellectual, vivacious, plenty of that incomparable Irish wit; her ideals and ambitions are of the highest but due to circumstances unavoidable she has not had as many advantages as most girls.

"Won't you step in and give her a chance? She is in every way worthy of this European trip and one who would make the most of and appreciate such a gift."

That's it! This is not a beauty contest. It is a search for a New England girl of refinement, culture, poise, dignity, charm, personality, intellect, all that is truly New England and all that New England has given its womanhood.

SEARCH ENDS SEPT. 15

For such a girl do we search and we'll keep on looking until September 15 at midnight when the quest stops and those who have entered the Paris trip contest will be thoroughly considered.

From Lynn comes Genevieve Mildred Butler, who says she is a violinist and is interested in art, athletics and dancing. She lives at 55 Summer st. and was educated in the schools of the shoe city. Miss Butler is a blonde and we print her picture today.

At random from our file we pick out the signed coupon of Gertrude L. Gaynor, who is interested in music and lives at 44 Plain st., Randolph. Gertrude is another brunette with 130 pounds to her credit.

While from Woonsocket, R. I. comes Aurore Wood of 58 Arnold st., who wants to be considered as the possible New England girl winner. Another brunette, 5 feet 3 inches in height.

If you know the TYPICAL NEW ENGLAND GIRL and you want to help her get that coveted trip to Paris, send her photograph and enclose the completed coupon to the Typical New England Girl Editor, Boston Evening American.

Visiting Mayor Can't See This New Dancing

It may be a far yodel from Sam Bernard to John Franklin, but the echo answers, "Yes."

The late comedian used to sing a ridiculous song entitled, "They Call It Dancing," which is just the way His Worship, John Beasley Franklin, mayor of Waltham Cross and chairman of the Chestnut Urban District, County of Herts, Eng., feels about it.

His Worship (and that will be the last of that) has been an English dancing master for the last 30 of his 63 years, and on Thursday night at the Tercentenary ball to be given in his honor in Waltham, he will give an exhibition of how it should be done, to his own and Sam Bernard's liking.

TO GIVE EXHIBITION

Ever since he arrived, ten days ago, to be the guest at Waltham's Tercentenary celebration, the populace has been waiting to see him dance, and he has been just as eager to please, but hasn't found the time. The ball was arranged especially to give him the opportunity of an exhibition dance with a partner (hearts aflutter) as yet unnamed.

"I love it," he says of dancing. "The Tercentenary committee is going to pick out my partner and I hope we can have a rehearsal."

FIRST TO ENLIST

And if by any chance it should occur to you that he is the least bit effeminate, be assured that, at the age of 47, in 1914, he was the first man in Waltham Cross to volunteer for war service, was a sharpshooter and musketry instructor and was two years in France as armory staff sergeant of the Seaforth Highlanders, serving through the Somme push and emerging with the War Medal.

Sold Boy Smokes, Pays $10

Read This and Then Root for Boston

Did you know that Boston is 1204 miles nearer the west coast of South America than San Francisco?

Or that Boston is 117 miles nearer Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires than Baltimore?

It is and these are some of the interesting and important facts revealed by the Bureau of Commercial and Industrial Affairs of the Chamber of Commerce in a booklet entitled "Boston an Old City with New Opportunities" just issued.

More than 1,000,000 persons enter the downtown district every week day.

Boston has 31 department stores, the metropolitan district 25,000 retail stores.

BIGGEST WAREHOUSE

The pamphlet, which bears on its cover an interesting airplane view of the city, was prepared for free distribution among business concerns which request copies.

There are numerous photographs of the business and industrial life of the city, and each industry is treated separately with an abundance of statistics and other information.

"Metropolitan Boston is the most densely populated metropolitan area in the United States," the chamber declares. "The city welcomes more than 500,000 convention visitors every year.

"In one warehouse, the largest in the world, the Hub can store more than 100,000,000 pounds of wool and more than a third of the raw wool imported into this country each year comes to Boston.

MOST DENSELY POPULATED

"Boston bank clearings average more than $2,300,000 monthly. New England makes enough shoes every year to outfit every man, woman and child in the United States. One-fifth of the country's fish catch is landed at New England ports, and this section, with a per capita savings of more than $560, is the thriftiest region in the United States.

"The 43 cities and towns embraced in the metropolitan district contain nearly 50 per cent of the population of Massachusetts, although representing less than six per cent of the area of the state.

With a total population of 1,955,235, Greater Boston has about 4728 persons per square mile and is the most densely populated metropolitan area in America. It is fourth in size among metropolitan districts in the United States.

"Boston, most easterly of the principal Atlantic seaports, has the finest natural harbor on the coast. Its harbor has an area of 47 square miles and a water frontage of more than 140 miles, of which seven miles have a depth of 35 feet or more.

PIER FACILITIES

"In its equipment of modern piers, docks and warehouses, it stands well to the front among the great ports of the world. There are more than 200 wharves in the port. Extensive facilities are available for transfer of cargoes.

"The port of Boston is 200 miles nearer Europe than New York. As compared with any other Atlantic seaport, from 150 to 500 miles is saved in the voyage from Boston to Copenhagen, Hamburg, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Cherbourg, Havre, Liverpool, London, Gibraltar, Naples or Constantinople.

"Passengers to and from the interior may save a day or more by embarking or debarking at Boston. The port of Boston is second only to New York in total value of foreign and domestic waterborne commerce, and second only to New York in the number of overseas passengers."

CODMAN WARNS OF DRY 'SCARE'

The only question involved in repeal of the Baby Volstead act is whether voters favor repeal of the national Eighteenth Amendment, Col. Julian Codman told the [illegible] at luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce building today.

Col. Codman, general counsel for the Constitutional Liberty League, said the argument of lawlessness spread by supporters of the Baby Volstead act is an evidence of desperation.

With the Baby Volstead act repealed, he said, there will still be a[illegible] the law in the state necessary to prevent sale or exposure of intoxicating liquor.

"This propaganda," he said, "is being deliberately spread to frighten conscientious people who are opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment into voting to retain the Baby Volstead law, for unless such people can be intimidated, the repeal of the law by a large majority is certain."

Q AND A DEPARTMENT

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella:

Is the [illegible] animal? [illegible]

Ans. Now you may be all right, Sir or Madame Animal Lover. I ain't saying no. But I seem to detect a certain tone in your letter style that makes me suspicious. So, if you're the party I think you are and I answer your innocent sounding question in the affirmative, and then you come back with some crack about why don't I wash my neck then, I don't mind saying there's danger in your eye, hearie. I hope I make myself clear, you dodo.

Aunt ("Friend or Foe") Bella.

BIG IDEA DEPARTMENT

To [illegible] worthy of the [illegible]

Picking up a paper somebody had left on my neighbor's porch [illegible] I was surprised to learn that a dollar is now worth a dollar and fifteen cents. A great many honest citizens must have dollars and realize they have done nothing to earn the extra fifteen cents, and therefore have no real right to it. After giving the matter a deal of thought, I have decided that the only honorable thing for such citizens to do is donate the superfluity to my campaign committee.

Congressman Horace B. Frisby.

Tris Tells Judy That He Left His Home as a 'Gray' Sheep

Peggy was reading in bed, elbows propped on pillows against the rolling of the ship, an empty chocolate pot on the night table.

Now she glanced up quickly, saw Judy's face—the light that seemed to shimmer all about her — thought with a pang, "I wished this desired life for her. Color, beauty, love. The tall boy with the quiet eyes? She would find calm with him: the holy peace of a shrine. Or the other? No serenity for her there. He might give the throbbing heart of life into her hands—never long, white, gentle hours.

"But after — ah, yes, after all——"

Peggy's code permitted no interference. "What if Judy is my girl?" she once said to Mrs. Rowe. "Children are individuals first—sons and daughters afterward. We have police protection, but what's to protect the privacy of children from the depredations of their savage parents? Let them shape their own lives; it's their right."

The old memory fleeted through her mind now, this and Mrs. Rowe's sniff as Judy paused with her back to the door, a misty sweetness in her face.

Is It Love?

Peggy Asks Judy

"I've kept you awake, mother? Or is it that you have a scolding handy for the gallivantin' gal and her scandalous hours?"

"I'd be more likely to have a pat ready, baby." The radiance of her caught Peggy's heart, made her wish to enfold the girl as when she was a tiny thing, say coaxingly, "Is it love, dear? Or just a small flame to light a summer's vacation?"

But she never would ask a confidence not first offered. She returned to her novel and over the pages watched Judy remove the Dresden Shepherdess frock, draw her hand down the folds in a tender way, linger before the mirror running the comb through her hair, pausing sometimes with her arm in midair to smile, to flush rose red, give her head a shake.

Once she frowned and Peggy thought, "It doesn't run smoothly? Obstacles? But you don't know the whirlpools yet, my dear, nor the Niagara drop of parting—"

But Judy was not thinking of love, she was remembering the flash in Kit Camp's eyes as he watched her and Tris from the top of the companionway. A mounting restlessness caught her when she recalled that look. How could he make her feel this way, dissatisfied somehow with all the glow? Not a disapproving scrutiny he had turned upon her; it was curious, almost as if he wished to say something—some tremendous thing she must hear.

She sat on the edge of the bed, saw again the hurricane deck, Kit Camp and herself rolled in blankets, stretched out side by side. Something merry and sweet about Kit Camp. Even when he gripped her wrists, looked down at her with straightened lips he was this. She had left at her at her best with him—the best of the real Judy, so calm he was so poised.

Thought of Kit

He Was So Poised

But he was sure of himself—high-handed. Superior male. She had forgotten this for a moment. Kit was the condescending male to the fingertips; a girl had to watch her step with one like him. Tris—lithe, sparkling thing—only man in all her life who didn't rub up her antagonism.

An appealing youngness about him sometimes. But he was restless, weary behind the smooth, laughing manner. Weary of many things — a boy in his twenties!

What was the mystery about Tristram Millet? Why did the sailor drop on him in the dark, fight so viciously? Did he mistake Tris for someone else? Tris had told her this, but she did not believe it. And if it were not true, if the sailor knew Tris, meant to kill him, why then—

Why then Tris knew what had happened in Halifax!

She whispered "Yes!" in a little gasp, put her head down so Peggy would not see the sudden drawing of her features. What did she care because a shadow hovered over Tris? Why did she feel herself caught in a swinging lightness, tingling and sweet, when she remembered the feel of his kisses, his arms?

A sudden chill wound her heart.

"Where does this take me?" she thought. "They say love begins this way. Girls let themselves be caught in the glamour. That's because they don't look ahead—because they think it always will be glamour,—shine of a star, flash of a wave. They forget progress—what they are capable of——."

When she met Tris as she was walking around the deck next morning lashed to a glow by the north wind she was smiling, a bit tremulous but determined.

"Well, hello! Thought you never arose before noon? But perhaps you wanted to see this and that?"

"Wanted to see you, my sweet." He took her arm with a gay chuckle, drew her toward the rail. The ocean was a tumbling mass of drab and far to the northeast was a line of springing white against a bleak shore line. "Look, Judy—teeth of the sea. Gnawing at the rocks. Anticosti Island over thef."

"That wasn't fair! You've no right, Tris."

"Haven't I? You don't believe that. Not after last night. You won't forget last night. I know this, Judy, that you're not one who forgets easily."

She leaned upon the rail, felt the sparkle creeping in her veins [illegible]. He had the power to do this to her; as well try to stop [illegible] stand here with him face to face and deny it.

"Tris," she said, suddenly, "tell me about you. Your home, your people. What things have been like for you. What you want. Meeting you this way is like a picture out of a frame; you've no way to tell what it might be. It's all a blur——"

"Oh—the frame is important? Disregard the past! Only today matters—and tomorrow. Got up in the middle of the night to tell you this, my sweet." His look turned quickly from her puzzled frown, the question in her eyes. "Well, then—well, then. Home—Chicago; family—yes and no. What newspapers call 'pillars of society' do you see? Money—that sort of thing. Don't fancy a gray sheep in their midst. Not black, Judy—only spotty gray. The prodigal son. But unrepentant."

He was so gleeful about it that she had to laugh. "So the prodigal fares in far countries? Feeds on husks?"

"Not as a rule." A snap to that; hardness beneath his easy race. "You've longed for adventure, too. Would you give it up because sometimes there's coffee and sinkers instead of caviar? Tang to the cup, sweet. Open road — freedom of the world. Rather this than the safe and stodgy narrow way."

He bent over, gave her a long, intent look. "Now I'll go, Judy. Wanted this—to speak to you."

He caught her hands, put her palms together and pressed them in a lingering grip, left her without a smile, another word.

She turned to watch him, thought a-kindle to his vibrant lure. Someone was coming along the deck; someone stood beside her, waiting in a sure patience.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

THE PAPER curl is achieved by taking small short whisps of hair forming into flat curls, covering with paper and pressing with a hot iron clamp made for the purpose. When properly done, there is an almost perfect marcel line close to the head, while the ends of the hair fall into ringlets. On a thick head of hair 40 or 50 curls are necessary.

Powdered zinc, combined with water, makes a good paste for cleaning the edges of the finger nails. It can be applied with an orangewood stick. Be careful to produce a straight even line. Powdered pumice stone mixed with olive oil will dig out hangnails—if the finger tips are first soaked in warm soapsuds. Then the pointed scissors must be used.

Very kinky hair requires special treatment. After it is shampooed, right out of the bowl and dripping wet, liquid vaseline is applied with a stiff brush. The mixture of oil and water takes the crimp out. When every strand is as straight as a string, a hair net is applied and the topcrest dried quickly with a hot air dryer. After that it can be marceled.

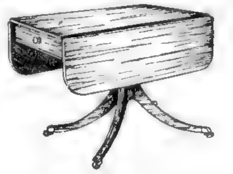
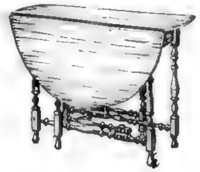
What's in Fashion?

Turning the Tables—Into Many Uses

Directed by AMOS PARRISH



Duncan Phyfe Drop Leaf



The Popular Gate-Leg

That just because a thing is beautiful, it need not necessarily be useless. And—contrariwise, as Tweedle Dee would say—just because it's useful, it needn't be ugly.

If you want more proof than just our word for it . . . look at the tables that fashionable living rooms use most.

They are beautiful. They have graceful legs . . . lovely turnings . . . pleasant curves . . . handsome woods.

And how modern, practicality-loving folks use 'em! Every day and all day. For all sorts of different things.

To hold lamps and magazines and books. To play bridge . . . or pinochle . . . or rummy . . . or solitaire.

Because many of these fashionable modern tables are found in fashionable apartments . . . where the living room is the dining room, too. And then the table that stands smartly up against the wall most of the day, is pulled out at three regular hours for its earliest, most primitive use.

"Two-in-one" tables, as they're so aptly called, in fashion. And "two-in-one only" means a table with leaves that can be opened or dropped flat against the sides, or a table that can be extended by means of pull-out leaves to accommodate several people around it.

Gate-Leg Table

Take the very much-in-fashion gate-leg, for example. One of the most popular tables there is, so our furniture fashion checkups show.

Both leaves can be dropped, leaving a minimum of table top. It takes up hardly more than a foot of width in a room when it's in this position.

Plenty of Space

Or one leaf is dropped and the other left extended. Good decorative possibilities there. And enough space to hold a dozen books between book-ends, a lamp and several magazines.

With both leaves extended, from four to six people can sit comfortably around it.

The one we've had sketched suggests the style [illegible] period in the turnings on its legs. And it was used in that period as well as through all the years since.

Most often you see this table in walnut or mahogany. And occasionally you find it with an extra leaf that can be inserted in the center top panel for still greater size.

Tavern Table

A good type of extension table is illustrated in the sketch at the lower right. It's in Tudor style and usually made in walnut. The leaves pull out at each end, making a long, rather narrow table.

One of the loveliest tables of all—so many people think—is the Eighteenth Century type sketched at the upper left. It's slightly more formal, but none the less useful—for its drop leaves, when lifted, make room for the whole family.

How to Keep Well

Children Needn't Fear Undulant Fever

Dr. Copeland

RECENTLY I have had letters about "undulant fever."

This is an infectious disease of goats, sheep, pigs and cattle. Human beings may become infected while caring for or while slaughtering infected animals. Persons who are particularly susceptible to the germ have developed undulant fever by drinking the milk of infected animals.

The disease is characterized by chills in alternation with a decided rise in temperature. Other symptoms are sweats, anemia, general rundown condition and arthritis of the hip, ankle, shoulder or knee joints. Occasionally there is bronchitis, and abscesses may be present beneath the skin.

The fever usually runs about three months, although cases have been known to last a year or two. Undulant fever rarely results in death, but causes great distress due to the length of time the patient is unable to attend his usual duties. Weakness seems to be the only after-effect.

There is as yet no specific treatment. It is hoped that vaccines may be developed to control the disease. In the meantime patients are treated much as those having typhoid fever.

Every effort must be put forth to eliminate the disease among the cattle and pigs. Until this is accomplished there is always the chance that the disease may be spread by those who come in contact with infected animals. These persons should at all times exercise the greatest care in order to avoid contracting or transmitting to others any possible infection. The hands must be carefully disinfected and all cuts and scratches properly cared for.

Mothers of young children need have no great fear for their little ones, as the disease apparently does not attack children. Not only must the milk be pasteurized, but it must have, from first to last, the greatest care. Milk may be pasteurized and yet be contaminated after this process is completed.

Be sure the milk and all milk products which you use are obtained from dairies which are carefully inspected.

Pointers on Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Hats and the Hotel Dining Room

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A party is taking a sight-seeing trip to Niagara, Quebec, Montreal and Thousand Islands which will last about a week. The party will stop en route at different hotels. A says as guests in a hotel, the ladies of the party should not wear hats into the dining room. B says hats should be worn into the dining room. Will you kindly settle it for us?
H. M. K.

Since, on such a trip, the ladies will probably dress informally for dinner, it is best form for them to wear their hats to the dining room. Indeed, unless a woman is dressing formally for dinner at a hotel, or unless the hotel is a summer resort hotel at which she is stopping for some time, it is always best for her to wear her hat to a hotel dining room.

Butter With Bread

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

In a formal dinner is it correct to serve butter with the bread? I have looked in many etiquette books but have been unable to find the answer.
A READER.

At a strictly formal dinner, no butter is served with the rolls or bread. Indeed, at a strictly formal dinner, we find no bread and butter plates placed, and no individual butter spreader.

But, unless the dinner comes under the heading of "strictly formal," we usually find a bread and butter plate, if not for butter, as a place on which to put our celery, radishes, olives, nuts, as well as our rolls or bread. And if we wish, we may if the dinner is not "strictly formal," serve butter.

To Help His Sister

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a fellow for two years. The first half of the year we went steady, seeing each other every night. We were both in love. One day his sister brought a girl home from the same factory she works in. She was the head one. He thought if he went out with her it would mean a better job for his sister. Finally we came to a decision—that he would take me out once in a while and take the other girl out, too. Please tell me what to do. Shall I trust him again?
PUZZLED

Dear Puzzled: I don't see that it's a question of "trusting" him at all. You entered into the arrangement with him and were willing for him to take this other girl out for what we might call "diplomatic reasons," which may or may not have served their purpose and which I myself would be inclined to resent.

Second Lesson on Pickles and Making Relishes

From Martha Lee's Wednesday morning broadcast over WHDH by the Boston Evening American

THANK YOU [illegible] give you to-day some more tested recipes [illegible] catsup, chili sauce, green tomato sweet pickle and apple chutney. Even our June brides can use these recipes successfully.

Martha Lee

Of course, you cannot expect the tomato catsup and chili sauce to be the bright red of the commercial product, but you can expect them to be exceptionally delicious and they'll add zest to the [illegible] meal next winter.

I do think that pickles and relishes are the most satisfactory of all the canning processes as there is almost never a failure. And besides being served as relishes for your meat dishes in the cold weather, remember that a quarter cup of these chopped relishes added to a cup of mayonnaise makes a most delicious tartar sauce for fish, oysters and meat.

CHILI SAUCE

Chop together 2 qts. peeled ripe tomatoes, 2 green peppers and 2 onions until fine. Add 1 pt. vinegar, 1 tbsp. salt, ½ cup brown sugar and 1 tsp. each of cloves, allspice and black pepper. Boil until thick. Pour into jars and seal.

TOMATO CATSUP

4 tbsps. salt
1½ tbsps. black pepper
3 tbsps. cinnamon
2 tbsps. allspice
1¼ cups vinegar

Wash and remove stems from tomatoes; cut into small pieces. Put all ingredients in kettle and boil until cooked down one-half. Stir occasionally to keep from burning. Strain, bring to a boil and pour into sterilized jars. Seal.

GREEN TOMATO SWEET PICKLE

Make a syrup by boiling 1½ qts. of vinegar, 3 lbs. of sugar and 1 tsp. each of whole cloves and allspice with 1 stick of cinnamon, tied in a cheesecloth bag. Slice 8 lbs. of green tomatoes thin, steam until tender, pack into jars, cover with syrup and seal.

The tomatoes may be cooked in the spiced vinegar a few at a time, put in jars, covered with the vinegar in which they were cooked and the jars processed 10 minutes in water bath.

CHAPTER 72

RAQUEL WAITED. Dusk was drawing curtains across the windows of the room in which she sat creeping into the corners, seeping into her heart and across her soul.

A woman in a starched white [illegible] and a mite of a white cap that perched perilously on the top of her blonde hair came into the room and switched on the lights.

"Dr. Logan will see you now," she said crisply.

"About your husband, Mrs. Parker," he said. His eyes were fastened on her as if to command silence.

"Somewhere," the stern voice went on, "Mr. Parker has picked up a germ. I'm convinced it must have been either in water he drank or food he ate while in Europe. Anyhow, he has it."

"But you can kill the germ—" she cried.

He did not answer. Only bored her with those eyes of command. She sank into the chair again.

"No," he said, and hurried on before she could shrill again. "But he can, with your help."

"The germ of which I speak attacks the blood," said Dr. Logan. "A hot, dry climate is necessary. And the outdoors. Eat, sleep, live out of doors. Away from people. From things. Quiet, content, peace. I have decided the best place to stage the battle is southern Arizona."

"Your husband will be relieved," he said. "He had an idea it would be the last place in the world you would want to go."

"Then Jerry knows?"

"Yes. He knows. He has asked me to tell you that if you will be unhappy about going, there are other places that might do. I believe a year or two will fix him fine, in Arizona. It might take longer in another place."

"We shall fight it out in Arizona," Raquel said. Her voice was faint, far away. Darkness in the room, lights out.

It was the first time Raquel had ever swooned in all her turbulent young life.

"But Raquel," he said. Grave. "You will be buried down there. You're so beautiful, so fine, so alive—to take you away from it all——"

"I know just the place," Raquel trilled on. "A rancho right on the border by the Rio Grande. A man from the East built it. There's a patio with a fountain—we'll have our meals served there—and it's irrigated for a flower garden—there's running water even. You'll love it, Jerry."

"But lonesome for the Queen of Beauty——"

Franklin Head Forecasts Auto Trade Trend

Tendency Is for Increased Power and Speed He Asserts

By M. S. Rukeyser

M. S. Rukeyser

New York, Aug. [illegible] extent the automobile industry has become a balance wheel of [illegible] and [illegible] trends [illegible] has faced [illegible] many [illegible] Franklin Automobile [illegible] this column [illegible]

"Our shipments for the first six months of 1930 in common with the industry are low compared to last year. We are only 4 per cent below 1928 however while the industry, excluding Ford, is approximately 35 per cent below.

"Retail business has held up exceptionally strong. We are 16 per cent below last year, which was the largest year in our history, and 44 per cent ahead of 1928.

"Sales for the second half of 1930 should be helped by introduction of new models and through a growing opinion that general business is improving. However sales and profits for 1930 will be low compared to last year."

Questioned as to whether the [illegible] increasing [illegible] for cheap cars represented more than a temporary phase, Mr. Franklin replied:

"Excluding Ford there is no indication of any marked trend to lower priced cars over 1929. There is a 4 per cent decrease in the $1000 to $2000 wholesale price range, which has gone into the below $1000 range, but the cars selling above $2000 show the same precentage as in 1929. In my opinion, should there be any indication of a permanent trend for low-priced cars, price adjustments would be in order."

Questioned [illegible] dealers, Mr. Franklin [illegible]

"Our dealers' situation has improved. Additional capital, new capital with new personnel have been secured in many important distributing points. Dealers stocks are low. Most of the manufacturers have introduced methods, personnel etc. to improve the dealer in merchandising and management."

Mr. Franklin [illegible] of any radical [illegible] the industry may have [illegible] sleeve but pointed [illegible] that the tendency is for increased power and speed.

Asked [illegible] many to continue [illegible] was resulting [illegible] for [illegible] said:

"If there is any pent-up demand created by the decision of owners to drive their old cars, it will be reflected in 1931."

* * *

As to operating economies established, Mr. Franklin said:

"During the past two years we have completely arranged our plant and manufacturing processes, installing the most modern machinery."

Queried about wages, Mr. Franklin said:

"We have not and do not intend to change our hourly wage rates. Present wages should be maintained. Cost reductions must be secured through improved methods."

As to what is needed to improve exports, Mr. Franklin, whose headquarters is at Syracuse, N. Y., pointed out:

"Import business has been poor because of depressed business conditions and tariff agitation. The normal purchase of foreign goods and foreign securities by United States interests will give credit facilities abroad which should increase exports."

* * *

The final question was: Has the depression strengthened or diminished your faith in the efficacy of selling automobiles on the instalment plan?

"Statistics of the four leading finance companies on June 30, 1930, show that they had on hand $328,000,000 of retail paper, compared with $339,000,000 on the same date last year, and that less than one-third of one per cent was overdue as much as 30 days, compared with one-fifth of one per cent last year. Paper overdue more than 60 days was not quite one-fifth of one per cent, compared to one-eighth of one per cent last year. Value of repossessed cars, representing final defaults, one-half of one per cent, compared to a little over one-quarter of one per cent last year."

"Creation of a railroad czar similar to those of the moving picture industry and baseball might prove one way of stabilizing railroad freight rates. At present it is the tendency of most executives to pass the buck when it comes to initiating increased rates, deeming it unwise to arouse enmity of customers. On the other hand, nothing is left undone toward making concessions when a trend of traffic can be diverted from a competing road.

"Railroads did a lot of complaining about truck competition and finally went into the business themselves. Such action was taken as the means of recovering lost earnings, but why stop there?"

Class A stock has preference as to cumulative dividends of $1.50 a year and after class B has received $1.50 participates with class B and to an additional 50 cents per share per annum.

Trading in Bond Market Is Quiet

New York, Aug. 20.—Trading in the bond market was a quiet affair today, and unimportant changes occurred in a wide list of domestic issues which have forged ahead the past few days. A continued inquiry for railroad issues forced the prices of several in this group to new peaks for the year.

Liabilities Studied

By JOHN W. LAIRD
(Irving Fisher Service)

New Haven, Aug. 20.—Relatively few business failures, in relatively modest amounts, take place in midsummer, and that was the case last month compared with the month preceding, when bank[illegible] failed for a total of more than $63,000,000. But last month's failed liabilities amounted much higher than those of the two Julys preceding.

When the weather conditions of the farming districts in this year [illegible] low prices [illegible] subnormal [illegible] general and widespread factory [illegible] the results are hardly surprising.

The statistics charted do not take into account bank failures, which aggravated the situation considerably. Money ease in the metropolitan centers should not be allowed to blind us to the fact that many interior banks are carrying security loans which, in effect, restrict their loans for commercial purposes.

Hence the cheerful dictum that "at least money is plentiful" is likely to be greeted by hollow laughter and coarse remarks among the merchants of the inland towns. It is [illegible] extant the difficulty of borrowing money except at high rates which has boosted the business mortality curve during recent months.

Mining & Smelting Profit Is $1,361,397

Montreal, Aug. 20.—The Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. of Canada for six months ended June 30 reports net operating profit (excluding West Kootenay Power & Light earnings) of $1,361,397 after depreciation, depletion, taxes and deductions for exploration and development of new properties, compared with $4,559,943 in the first half of 1929.

West Kootenay Power & Light Co., subsidiary of Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co., first six months' gross revenues were $[illegible] against $766,488.

Commodity Prices Hold Their Gains

Washington, Aug. 20.—The various changes in prices of individual commodities during the past week failed to disturb the wholesale price index of The National Fertilizer Association which advanced to 86.3 for the week of August 9.

Of the 14 groups in the index four declined, three advanced and seven showed no change.

A year ago the index stood at 97.8 as compared with 86.3 for the week of August 16, 1930.

REVERE COPPER NET $706,619

Revere Copper & Brass, Inc., reports for six months ended June 30 profit of $706,619 after miscellaneous charges, bond interest and depreciation. During 1930 $1,890,000 has been charged for inventory adjustment to reserve previously created for this purpose.

In the first half of 1929 the company reported net profit after depreciation, miscellaneous charges, interest, federal taxes and a deduction of $720,000 for inventory reserves of $2,237,617, equal, after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent and the $1 class A stock, to $2.66 a share on the 509,241 no-par shares of common then outstanding.

Upon formation of the corporation reserve for future inventory adjustments of $1,000,000 was established further to reduce inventory below balance sheet basis of cost or market whichever was lower. During 1929, in view of continuing price of copper, $880,000 was added to this reserve from earnings and $120,000 from paid-in-surplus. During 1930 $1,690,000 was charged to the reserve previously so created for this purpose bringing inventory as of June 30, 1930, to cost or market whichever was lower.

CURB MARKET IS LED UPWARD BY UTILITIES

New York, Aug. 20.—Under the leadership of utility stocks the upward swing of prices on the New York Curb Exchange was resumed today.

The [illegible] of the most part were [illegible] no encouragement to resume their operations [illegible] and [illegible] selling [illegible] was most [illegible] at the opening after which the rising tendency of leading equity issues imparted a firm tone to nearly the whole list.

Well established as an accurate barometer of the trend of the market, Electric Bond and Share [illegible] selling at the outset and spurted above the previous final, and at one point in the day's trading showed an advance of more than 2 points. The demand was sufficient to maintain the firm trend of the stock.

American Gas & Electric which failed to join the forward movement yesterday reached 2½ at the opening today, and then firmed. American and Foreign Power with warrants was another strong spot.

Associated Gas & Electric A, Brazilian Traction, Middlewest Utilities, American Cities B, United Gas New and United Light were well supported.

Petroleum shares held close to yesterday's final prices. Cities Service fluctuated narrowly. Standard Oil Co. stocks, Houston Oil, Ohio Oil and Vacuum were firm.

Among the specialties, Mead and Johnson attracted further buying. Trans Lux was more than usually active and sold about one point below the year's high. Deere suffered from profit taking. Acme Steel, an inactive stock, dropped 13½ points on a few sales to a new year's low.

YellowCab Profits

Today's News in Wall Street

An increasing number of economists who have been right in the past are venturing optimistic forecasts for finance and business. One Wall Street writer remarks that this is the fateful season of a decade for the judicious investor.

"I owe my fortune to bad times," says a wealthy man, "without them there would have been no good times for me."

Every period of depression in the history of the United States has been followed by an expansion that exceeded all of its predecessors.

ALCOHOL EARNING FIGURES ARE POOR

Current quarter earnings of manufacturers of alcohol and its by-products will be the poorest in their history, brokerage circles believe.

EFFECT OF ABOLITION OF OIL CURB PACT

The idea that the oil curtailment agreement may be dropped is based on the refusal of an important producer who has just brought in two gusher wells in the Oklahoma City pool to pro rate his output in accordance with the agreement. His attitude in this respect will undoubtedly be far reaching in its bearing on the situation as a whole. Another element of uncertainty concerns the status of bank loans obtained by many companies against oil held in storage and the effect of forced liquidation of these debts. One of the important wire houses received word late in the day that matters were adjusting themselves more satisfactorily, particularly with respect to proration.

SHORT INTEREST IN MARKET LARGE

Despite the rally in prices, estimates indicate the short interest in the market continues of tremendous proportions. At midday yesterday reports from the floor said stocks were lending flat, an unusually large number.

SWITCHING FROM SIMMONS STOCK

Quite some switching from Simmons into other stocks has been in progress recently and this is not unusual when the situation of the company is considered. Business has decreased each month in the current year and there was a severe drop last month which brought the volume for the first seven months of the year 15 per cent under the corresponding period of 1929. In some quarters it is believed [illegible] has discounted the [illegible] unfavorable showing for this year, but [illegible] gone out on the stock because of the fear of [illegible]

ELECTRIC BUSES PROVE SUCCESSFUL

Brooklyn & Queens Transit [illegible] an electric bus [illegible] Road line [illegible] experiment [illegible] proved so satisfactory that use of electric buses probably will be extended. Its advantages include freedom from a fixed lane to which a trolley car is confined [illegible] ease and [illegible] passengers at the curb.

Comments from passengers have been generally favorable [illegible] of 250 saying they preferred the electric bus to the trolley. [illegible] passengers, however, said they preferred the trolley car because of smooth ride on a trolley rather than a bumpy ride on a bus.

BEST & CO. REFLECT EXPANSION

Sales of Best & Co. thus far this year have reflected the expansion of the company's business [illegible] extending operations to [illegible] localities [illegible] There was an increase in volume of business of 6 per cent the first half of this year [illegible] at the same time [illegible] 147 per cent over the corresponding period [illegible]

NEWS OF MAJOR MARKETS

Trends of the Day — New York List

Traders were undaunted by isolated weakness in special stocks, such as the coppers and safety razor issues.

SHORTS SEEK COVER

Shorts were successively driven to cover in various groups, including steels, motors, amusements and specialties.

Amusement issues were strong in the late trading, Loew's and Radio Keith each rising more than 2 points, while Radio Corp. and Fox were firm.

National Cash Register, American Can, America Tobacco "B" and United Aircraft rose 2 to 3.

Early in the day, such issues as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, International Harvester, Eastman and American Water Works rose 2 to 3, while Cast, Auburn, Hupp and International Business Machine mounted 5 to 8.

STEEL REPORTS BETTER

More careful reports from the steel industry, an da better tone in th ecommodity markets encouraged bull operators to work for higher prices. Some recalcitrant bears offered opposition here and there, feeling that signs of business improvement were still altogether unconvincing.

The American Petroleum Institute's weekly report showed a further drop in crude oil production to the lowest since the latter part of 1928, but the rise in oils was blocked early in the day by continual rumors of a possible price-cutting in Texas and California. Atlantic Refining and the Standards of New Jersey an dNew York led the activity in this group.

Though inactive, the motor stocks were generally steady. Hudson sold up 1¾ at 30⅝ simultaneously with the announcement of the cut in the cash dividend from $5 to $3 a year, but the stock was in small demand at any time. General Motors moved up a point or so and higher prices were quoted for Briggs and Yellow Truck.

Rising prices for sugar, cigarettes, hogs and certain textiles were accepted as a "straw in the wind" indicating that commodity prices had finally struck bottom.

The sugar refiners marked up prices of the refined product 10 points, cigarette retailing establishments increased their prices and hogs sold at the highest prices of the year at Chicago. The futures markets were held back by profit taking and poor foreign demand, but grain and cotton bulls were encouraged by a number of important incidents.

CALL MONEY DROPS

The market dried up on the midday reaction, and was ready for the later rally which carried all of the favorites to the highest prices of the day. A drop in call money to 2 per cent may have helped the process, but Wall Street was generally convinced that the business prospect had improved and that stocks shouinld improve in the same proportion.

Federal Mining, an inactive issue, sold at 115, 35 points below the last transaction, and the lowest in 3 years.

The fact that dispatches quoting Secretary Mellon yesterday as looking for business improvement in a short time were repudiated by him, after having been widely mentioned by financing news tickers and by brokers' wires, seeme dto cause no concern. This was because Mr. Mellon said he wished no interpretation to be placed upon his denial of the statement, and what he was reported as having said was in line with much private banking opinion in Wall Street.

PESSIMISM WANING

F. N. Hoffstott, president of the Pressed Steel Car Corporation, was quoted as saying:

"The wave of pessimsim throughthe country appears to be waning, and some of the railroads already have started on repair programs."

The weekly steel trade reviews were the most encouraging of trade surveys coming to hand. Iron are seemed to see a few rays of light for the first time in several weeks.

Composite steel prices, howvaer, showed no further weakening, and strength in Pittsburgh scrap, which was marked up 50 cents ton today, was cheering.

The bull faction felt that such unfavorable developments as another falling off in freight movement, as reported for the week ended August 9, omission of the Warner Quinlan dividend, and reduction of the Hudson Motor annual rate from $5 to $3 a share, had been foreseen for some time, and should not prove important factors in the market.

Call money, after renewing at 2½ per cent, was finally reduced to 2 per cent, the first time it has reached that rate at the loan desk in 10 days, although outside funds have been plentiful at 2 per cent.

Mahoning Coal's Profit Is $482,188

New York, Aug. 20—The Mahoning Coal Railroad Co., controlled by New York Central, reports for quarter ended June 30 net of $482,188 after taxes and charges, equivalent after dividend requirements on 5 per cent preferred, to $15.79 a share (par $50) on 30,000 shares of common, against $504,204 or $16.53 a share in second quarter of 1929.

Net for six months was $756,264 after taxes and charges, equal to $24.65 a share on common, against $802,788 or $26.21 a share in first half of 1929.

Cotton Advances After Mixed Start

New York, Aug. 20—Cotton opened today at an advance of 7 points to a decline of 1 point. The advance met scattered selling, but the offerings were fairly well absorbed and the market steadied up again with the more active positions ruling about 4 to 9 points net higher.

Grains Are Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 20—Grains closed higher today with active short covering in corn a late feature. Corn was up 2 to 2⅝c, wheat 1½ to 1¾c, oats 1¼ to 1½c, and rye, 1 to 1⅝c.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

A BETTER INCOME

D. A., Dedham—I am married, with two dependents. I own no securities, but savings of many years total $15,000. I should like a better income and shall depend on your advice.

Ans.—Here is a plan: $2000 each Title Guarantee & Trust 5½s, Lawyers' Title & Guaranty 5½s, Suffolk Title & Guarantee 5½s, Steneck Trust 5½s, and State Title & Mortgage 5½s, ten shares each Cities Service preferred, St. Louis-San Francisco preferred, Standard Gas & Electric $6 preferred and twenty-five Southern California Edison preferred "B." The total cost is approximately $13,600, and the combined annual income $767. You should keep the remainder in the savings bank for emergencies which may arise.

WANTS FORECAST

J. C., Wilmington—I wonder if you can help me. Sometime ago I bought one hundred shares Armour "B" at 10 and am greatly discouraged at the inactivity of the stock. Do you think I can ever recover the money?

Ans.—Guessing future prices is distinctly outside our line. We advise only on investment. At recent levels Armour "B" is about seven points under the price you paid. The stock is a sheer speculation and has never paid a dividend. Operations for fiscal year ended November 2, 1929, resulted in net income of $4,970,000, compared with $6,397,200 in 1928 and deficit of $4,479,000 in 1927. How long you must wait for a recovery is conjectural.

NEED FACTS

J. H., Medford—A friend in New York suggested that I write to you for advice. I want to buy stock. What do you think of General Motors?

Ans.—General Motors has paid dividends, with extras, since 1907. The last extra was 30 cents a share January 1 last. In the six months ended June 30, 1930, earnings of $2.15 a share, contrasted with $3.38 for similar period of 1929. Net for 1929 was $5.49 a share, compared with $6.54 in 1928. These figures contrast with the regular annual rate of $3 a share. Under present economic conditions the stock is a business risk. Do you own any securities? How much money have you?

FOUR LISTED STOCKS

C. L., Everett — I have $6000 in a savings bank. I want to buy securities bringing 6 per cent that may be liquidated should such necessity arise. What do you suggest?

Ans.—Here is a plan. However, don't reduce your bank surplus below $2000. Buy ten shares each American Water Works & Electric first preferred, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific 7 per cent preferred, St. Louis-San Francisco preferred and fifteen Texas Corporation, costing less than $3800. The annual income of $235 is 6 per cent. These stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, are quickly marketable.

FOUR PER CENT

L. P., Arlington—I own excellent stocks and bonds bought on your advice. What do you think of United States Steel?

Ans.—United States Steel has paid dividends on the common stock since 1916; current rate from second quarter of 1926. Net for 1929 was $21.19 a share, compared with $12.50 in 1928 on a smaller capitalization. Earnings for the first six months of the current year were close to dividend requirements of $7 for the entire year. Despite reduction in operating capacity, however, the stock is still selling on a level to yield about 4 per cent. How much money have you?

WRONG SOURCE

J. E., Melrose—I want to buy good common stocks on margin and have selected American Can, General Electric, General Motors, Standard Oil of New Jersey, F. W. Woolworth and Warner Brothers. What do you think of them?

Ans.—You have come to the wrong source. We never advise marginal stock players. Though all but one of the stocks you name pay dividends, to say that you could go long (or short) of them and make a profit would be fallacious advice. However, whenever you are ready to buy securities for income, we can be of assistance.

American Financial News

BOSTON STOCK PRICES ARE IMPROVED

Prices on the Boston Stock Exchange today improved as the session advanced. Warren Bros. was an outstanding upside actor, with the common jumping more than 4 points. Boston Edison added more than 3, while American Telephone, after showing a slight decline, gained around 2.

Providence & Worcester was off 4 at 141. Gillette was soft in sympathy with the movement of razor issues on the "Big Board," and was down over 5 at its lowest, later rallying.

Connecticut & Passumpsic pfd. at 101 was off 2. Anaconda sold down over a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel lost a point. General Electric lifted more than a point.

Consolidated net earnings of International Hydro-Electric System for the June quarter available for dividends on Class A stock were $622,367, more than 2¼ times the earnings of $215,783 in the second quarter last year. Dividends on the Class A stock were $394,717.

Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co.'s interim report for the 12 months to June 30 shows net income of $2,553,115, or $4.56 a share on 500,000 common shares. These profits established a record for the period increasing 9.3 per cent over the $2,333,682, or $4.11 a share returned in the previous 12 months.

CIGARETTES MARKED UP

United Cigar Stores Co. has advanced price of cigarettes in New England, the Middle West and Northern New York to 12½ cents a package, $1.19 per carton and 30 cents per tin of 50. Former prices were 12 cents, $1.15 and 27 cents respectively.

Schulte Retail Stores also has advanced the price of cigarettes in certain localities.

While United Cigar Stores Co. has advanced prices of cigarettes only in these territories, this action has been taken to ascertain whether the retail trade is disposed to accept a higher price for this commodity, which has been selling close to the wholesale price. If the higher price is accepted generally, United Cigar Stores Co. probably will establish the new price in all territories.

Indiana Standard Adds to Holdings

As a result of purchase of the interest of Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp., Standard Oil Co. of Indiana now has control of Sinclair pipe line from Salt Creek field in Wyoming to Fremont, Mo. At the latter point connection is made with lines extending from Chicago to Gulf coast. The Wyoming line was laid by Sinclair in conformance with the Teapot Dome contract and consists of a main 10-inch line with 12-inch loops.

Standard of Indiana is considering placing new methods of refining gasoline in operation at its three refineries in Wyoming, which are running at only half of capacity. This gasoline is to be shipped by pipe line to markets.

Art Metal Report for Quarter Given

Art Metal Corporation Company reports for the quarter ended June 30, last, net income of $122,311 after charges and taxes, equivalent to 38 cents a share on the outstanding capital stock.

Six months' net income was $279,990 after charges and taxes, equal to 87 cents a share on the capital stock.

Portable Diesel Is Put on Market

San Francisco, Aug. 20—A new portable Diesel power unit, for use by construction engineers in the field, has been placed on the market by Atlas Imperial Diesel Engine Co. Claim is made that the new unit, burning cheap, low grade oil, reduces fuel cost 75 per cent to 85 per cent compared with gasoline engines, and is adapted for use with rock crushers, air compressors, concrete, railroad construction and road work and for mixers, electric generators, in sawmills, and other types of stationary use.

Airways Tonnage of Mail Larger

American Airways, Inc., transport subsidiary of The Aviation Corporation, carried 109,467 pounds of air mail over its various lines during July, as against 103,219 during June, an increase of 6248 pounds.

The revenue increase of American Airways for the month was $10,179.

Giannini Returns

A. P. Giannini of Bancamerica Blair Corp., was a passenger aboard the "Bremen" returning from abroad. He stated his return at this time was prompted by sudden illness of his father in California.

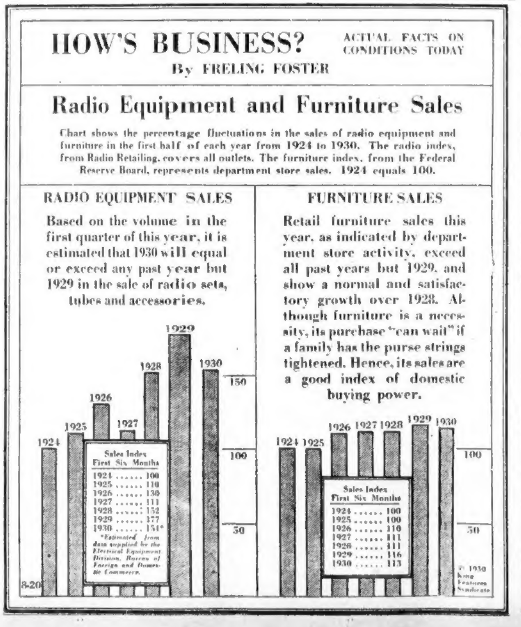
HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Radio Equipment and Furniture Sales

Chart shows the percentage fluctuations in the sales of radio equipment and furniture in the first half of each year from 1924 to 1930. The radio index, from Radio Retailing, covers all outlets. The furniture index, from the Federal Reserve Board, represents department store sales. 1924 equals 100.



RADIO EQUIPMENT SALES

Based on the volume in the first quarter of this year, it is estimated that 1930 will equal or exceed any past year but 1929 in the sale of radio sets, tubes and accessories.

Sales Index First Six Months

1928	152
1929	177
1930	154*

FURNITURE SALES

Retail furniture sales this year, as indicated by department store activity, exceed all past years but 1929, and show a normal and satisfactory growth over 1928. Although furniture is a necessity, its purchase "can wait" if a family has the purse strings tightened. Hence, its sales are a good index of domestic buying power.

Concerning Radio

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

A few pages of press material from the Columbia System are before me on the desk, and were you to be here and glance over our shoulder at the copy we feel sure you would declare it pretty dry reading. Facts, of course, are of importance to that great broadcasting system. Nevertheless, not what we term "human interest."

And yet it inspires within us a sort of philosophical state of mind; it prompts a desire to discourse at length upon the wonders of this age in which we live, and the powerful influence the radio is having in the every-day affairs of even the least of us.

The article to which we allude says that the Grigsby-Grunow and the Columbia System are co-sponsors in an educational course by radio. The idea was introduced during fifteen weeks last spring, and met with such favorable response they shall, beginning October 20, at 2:30 p. m., begin a course of 105 specially prepared half-hour educational broadcasts.

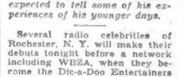
These courses cover so many subjects we cannot enumerate them here, but they are all of great importance to young students and most interestingly presented. The school will be guided by an advisory committee of noted educators, of whom Dr. William C. Bagley will act as dean.

"The pen is mightier than the sword the printed or written word has dethroned kings, it has built empires, it has been the greatest influence in the advancement of the human race that man has devised. And, the philosophical trend of thought, how rapidly and how far will the mighty influence of radio carry us in the coming generations. No man can predict. But properly supervised and directed, who can tell but what in the span of comparatively a few years radio may bring to us that Utopia of which we dream.

After which dissertation into the realm of facts and fancies, let us hop nimbly into the rarified atmosphere of high finance. Figures fascinate us; the kind with the dollar signs before them is what we mean. As far as we are concerned they will always represent what someone else has tucked away in the old sock. Just the same it can do no harm to wish.

A report for the first half of 1930, sent out by the Radio Corporation of America, says that the gross income was $52,732,079, and their net income was $505,098. Quite a tidy sum. It states that their current assets at June 30 were $79,393,338, and current liabilities $36,045,184. Can any subscribers comment on that?

"Love rules the world"; or does it? At least Evangeline Adams must be convinced it does, for in her many years of contact with the public, reading people's horoscopes and prophesying their futures little Cupid plays a most important part.



SHOULD I SHOOT HIM OR USE POISON?
SIGNED INNOCENCE

Miss Adams, who broadcasts three times a week over the Columbia network, has pretty nearly every conceivable question asked of her: What she thinks of the war in China, whether Mr. Hoover's horoscope indicates that we are going to have good times soon, and if September will be a good time to produce a play. But they end up, ninety out of every hundred, by talking about love.

Ring Lardner, one time sports correspondent of the Boston Evening American, where he had a large acquaintanceship, will confer with Grantland Rice on the Coca Cola program at 10:30 tonight over WEEI. Lardner, who is one of America's most prolific story writers, playwright and newspaper feature writer, is expected to tell some of his experiences of his younger days.

Several radio celebrities of Rochester, N. Y. will make their debuts tonight before a network including WBZA, when they become the Dic-a-Doo Entertainers for a new program series which listeners will hear each week at 7:45. Vocal and instrumental novelties will characterize the fifteen minute presentation, which will originate in Rochester. The two piano team of Helen Anker and Bob Hemmings, a woman's trio, a mixed octet and Sax Smith and his Cavaliers will be featured in the series.

Look for these tonight. A special fifteen minute feature from WNAC at 3:30 today, of the Claflin College male quartet. These singers originate from South Carolina and are a group of Negroes who are winning fame in many sections of the country. . . . The Forty Fathom Trawlers enact a sea drama over WNAC at 8:30 p. m. . . . The Philco concert over WNAC at 10 o'clock when they pay tribute to the greatest musical gift of all—the gift of melody. . . . And the Mobiloil concert from WEEI at 8:30 when the program features a variety of interesting instrumental specialties.

RADIO Personalities

The day VERNON RALCLIFFE, NBC production man, was assigned to the Crime Prevention program, he was called by the N. Y. Police Dept. and told that his stolen typewriter had been recovered. . . . FREDDIE RICH and VINCENT SOREY were locked fast in debate as to which music was preferred by the people, American or foreign. They took their argument to HOWARD BARLOW and asked him what music do radio audiences like best. "Good music," was his answer. . . . Like the boy who stood on the burning deck, so did the control operators of WBT in Charlotte, N. C. hold their post while a four alarm fire swept the four floors below their quarters. . . . JACK RICKER, CBS production director, just became a pa. . . . The question of the week: A fan wrote to CBS and asked particulars regarding MAYHEW LAKE, "the summer resort he had heard advertised on the radio. . . . B. A. ROLFE has the most cosmopolitan orchestra of any radio team. The different nationalities gather outside studio corridors and converse in their native tongues. Strangers who eavesdrop think they have been ushered into a modern tower of Babel. . . . NBC receives over two million fan letters a year.

Lucky Girl

selves the way they do on shipboard and trains and such. We might as well talk as sit and silently cry. My name's Moore—Gordon Moore, at your service!"

"Mine's Paige, Catherine Paige. But I wasn't crying!"

"But I felt a little like it, just before you spoke," she admitted, dimpling again.

"I thought you looked a little low."

"Oh, I'm not low! It's really just the opposite . . . that is . . ." All Cathie's training warned her against talking to strangers. It wasn't the thing to do at all. Ma'd be ashamed of her . . . and here she was, on the point of telling everything that was on her mind . . .

"That is," he prompted.

Air Castles

"Well, I THINK I have the job," she finished impulsively, scanning his face with her guileless, clear blue eyes, "but that's the trouble with me, do you see? I'm always thinking something wonderful is going to happen, and half the time it doesn't. It has never happened yet and—"

"It will this time. I'm sure of it."

"Oh! What makes you think that? Do you really think that I . . . that they . . . I mean, Mr. Farnsworth—"

"Absolutely. I know Farnsworth. He'll like you."

"I'm sure of it."

"Oh, I hope you're right!" She laid a slim, eager hand on his sleeve. "It means so much. I was just sure of it, at first, when I first came in. I—I could hardly wait to see him, to get home to tell the family I had it. And then I got to thinking. Whey, when I first started looking for work I used to have my first month's pay all spent in my head before I ever saw the place, and when I did they always had somebody else to try-out first and so . . . did you ever have to look for a job?"

He grinned. "Yes, but not lately. I work for my brother. A brother can't very well fire you, do you see?"

"Good Luck"

"Nobody would DARE to fire you!" she thought, studying his thin aristocratic face, with its high-bridge nose and arrogant, thin-lipped mouth. And before she could think of a reply the door that she had watched for so long opened and a thick-set elderly man looked into the waiting room, and beckoned to Moore. "Come in. Sorry to have kept you waiting. It was unavoidable."

In the doorway to the inner office Gordon Moore turned back to Cathie and smiled.

"Good luck!" he said.

Cathie settled back in her chair. After a long time the gray-haired man opened the door again. "I can see you now," he said pleasantly.

Cathie followed him, hoping she wouldn't be too scared to talk. She had forgotten all the things she had planned to say. That's what comes of having to wait so long, and making a silly of yourself over a good looking young man who really doesn't care a thing about you . . . and letting yourself imagine all kinds of crazy things . . . and forgetting what you came for, and how much it matters . . . how much it matters . . .

Wins the Job

Her troubled thoughts scampered ahead of her, her throat felt dry. But she must have answered the few questions put to her more intelligently than she knew, for Mr. Farnsworth had risen.

"Tomorrow at 9, then," he was saying.

She had the job!

Somehow she got downstairs, out of the building into the street. She felt dizzy with excitement and relief. She had a job, she had a job, she had a job! Her heart sang it. The very traffic of the street hummed it . . .

A job! Oh, the blessed relief. Oh, how happy she ought to be . . . but she wasn't exactly. Tomorrow she would be, of course and tonight, after she'd got home, and had had a chance to get that man out of her head. Funny, his speaking to her that way . . . silly! To keep thinking about him, instead of . . . of other things . . . home . . . ma . . . the job . . .

Waiting For Her

His voice. The voice of the man in the office. Cathie blushed to the roots of her hair, turned, looked full into the thin, aristocratic face of Gordon Moore. He'd been waiting . . . waiting for her . . . waiting to see if she . . .

"Oh, yes!" she cried, "I got it!" And her small, flushed face was lit again with the poignant beauty of her amazing, gorgeous smile.

"I got what I went after too. How about celebrating?" He was smiling back at her quizzically. His arm half encircled her, to protect her from the hurrying crowd.

"Celebrating?" There had been little of celebrating in Cathie's short life.

"Yes. Lunch at one of the big hotels. How about the one on the hill?"

"Lunch?" So it was lunch time. Cathie hadn't known. She didn't care now. She didn't care if she ever ate again. He had waited for her, and she had the job, and they were going to celebrate . . .

She oughtn't to go, but she was going to. It was a chance . . . her first real chance for . . . oh, for everything she'd always wanted . . . everything! She wouldn't miss it! Not she!

And as she stepped into the taxi, a real taxi, and Gordon Moore stepped in beside her, she thought:

"It won't take long. I'll be home soon . . . I've just got to go! Why, it may change my whole life!"

TOMORROW—Cathie has a wonderful adventure.

All used cars are checked for adjustments and mechanical condition before they are offered for sale by the Automobile Merchants of Greater Boston. YOU can—unleash these additional miles in a good used car more profitably today than ever before. Prices are lower and terms are more interesting just now.

NOTICE TO AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

Right now the automobile merchants of Greater Boston are making drastic price reductions on all Used Cars for the sole purpose of clearing their salesroom floors.

To the man owning an old model car such as 1924, 1925 or 1926, we offer the following suggestion that he may realize the utmost on his present investment toward the purchase of a late model Used Car.

The automobile merchant cannot make a large allowance on these older cars, but you can sell the car independently of him, and after receiving the down payment, the dealer from whom you plan to buy a late model Used Car can finance the balance of the payments owing to you.

Certainly this is a fair arrangement. It permits you to buy a later model car than the one you now own plus taking advantage of the drastic price reductions now in effect, and allows the dealer to give you an additional discount because he does not have to pay a salesman's commission on the resale of your old car.

Remember, the dealers have reduced prices on all Used Cars to clear their salesrooms.

Making Traffic Progress

At Least We're Doing Something About It

Patience is a virtue; in our traffic tangles it's as necessary as the shoes we wear.

For a generation public officials watched traffic congestion pile up in the city. They could not widen the streets; that might increase the tax rate and spoil their chances for re-election. So, they sat back, twirled their thumbs, contemplated the marvellous growth of the auto with personal satisfaction and allowed conditions to go from bad to worse.

The present-day officials of Boston are grappling with this problem which has all the elements of a Gordian knot.

Pedestrians complain that the new traffic lights have none of the personal touch and intimate consideration of the traffic policeman. No, but they have none of favoritism or surliness, either.

Autoists complain they are being tagged for overparking. Well, the other fellow has some right to the use of the streets.

We hear much complaint of favoritism and political pull. The tagged one who knows a pol who knows a policeman has his tag thrown into the wastebasket at Police Headquarters; while the uninfluential pays through the nose. That is a just complaint. Put it up to Commissioner Hultman.

Our merchants, in common with our other people, want traffic to move in a safe, even and steady flow through the streets. But their own trucks, heavily laden with wares, must stop somewhere to make deliveries, either to them or to their waiting customers. Result, drivers are arrested for double-parking, congestion rears its head and defies defeat.

Despite these contradictions, the situation is improving more rapidly than seemed possible. Conditions are far from gloomy; the sun is breaking through. A little more patience and a little less selfishness among all of us will give these experiments an ample test. They can be altered and strengthened in the light of experience. At least, the officials are trying, so let's give the boys a hand.

Suicide Cured

By Advertising

Billboards are a good deal of a nuisance—spoiling the scenery, interfering with the view. From Japan, however, comes an idea for a billboard that none could object to. This particular piece of outdoor advertising has been erected by the Women's Society of Kobe to check the suicide wave in Japan. And so effective has it been that within the last year 214 persons have come to the society and confessed that it kept them from self-destruction.

The billboard says:

> "Wait a Moment—God Is Love. If you are in such circumstances that death seems the only way out, please come to us. We will be your friends."

The society's address is also given.

Considering the number of persons here who end their lives, and of others who in moments of depression or discouragement think about it, such a billboard seems useful.

An anti-suicide society with a fund for outdoor advertising along the waterfront or elsewhere could do much good.

Horses

Not Yet Extinct

Not that it matters, but those who think the horse is an extinct quadruped are wrong. There are probably more today than there were thirty years ago when the auto was in its infancy and the airplane had not been invented.

Census experts will tell you that Indians are more numerous now than when Columbus discovered America. You don't notice them, that's all.

Personally we are glad of it. Cars and airplanes are faster, we admit. They get you there in a hurry. But you can't jump fences with them or feed them sugar. And they don't whinny when you throw open the door of the garage or hangar.

If they ever learn to do that they may oust the horse.

Not Uncle Sam

British airplanes bomb native villages on the northern frontier of India. This discourages rebellious tribesmen, who have no planes and find attack from the skies embarrassing.

On the same day, Brazilian planes help to capture the town of Princeza, deep in the interior. An insurrection was in progress there—until the planes arrived.

American marines fly over Sandino's camp in Nicaragua, and Sandino hastens across the border into Honduras. Fighting these days is poor fun, for those on the ground.

Napoleon said that God was on the side with the heaviest artillery. Napoleon would change "artillery" to "air force" if he were with us today.

Proud Uncle Sam rules Nicaragua, where the natives have no planes. But in the world, he doesn't count.

However, as he doesn't know it, he is happy, thinks he is really SOMEBODY.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY -:- By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, AUG. 20—The spotlight is, with all there is in the world to write up, being turned on the pay of columnists. Sime's theatrical weekly, Variety, started it with a stud-type banner: "Cal's No. 3 In Soft Jobs!" in welcoming the former President to columnar circles.

It has given other columnists a chance to lie about wages. My impression is most readers are surprised we are paid at all. My weekly stipend, so long as the whole gang has squealed, is $18 a week, Tuesday afternoons off, but I must furnish my own typewriter and eat out.

A guess is our whole outfit is headed for oblivion. The gloomy prediction is based on the fate of other rackets when financial facts leak out. Recently a critic said: "It is getting so anybody can be a columnist." There was certainly no intense struggle about it for me.

I fizzled like a wet firecracker on every other job on a newspaper before taking up columning. But as such a misfit have been able to live by grinding out a daily spasm like this. I am not alone in this good fortune. The halo of my fellows is the same tin hat.

* * *

The sooner the braggarts realize columning is one of those agreeable tricks Fate often plays on nobodies and quit blabbing about unearned increment, the longer we postpone the finish. I want to put it off until Dec. 18. The next payment on the piano is then. Or out it goes.

The columnist believes he is quite a case. John Gilbert, a year ago, I imagine had a similar conviction. I have said it before, and here it is again, nothing we do is at all important. We are happy victims of an extraordinarily lucky break and if we quit tomorrow others would do it as well, if not better.

* * *

This is no effort to steal a bow as a shrinking violet. None of us is freighted with modesty. Each believes—I know I am—the best in the business. That is the trouble. We are top heavy with the divine afflatus they call ego.

* * *

We tell our readers daily what we ate last night, who—as though everybody couldn't guess—paid the check, the night club we visited, the book we enjoyed and now we tattle about the size of the pay check. Actors used to do most of the talking about themselves, and look what happened. If I keep on in this depressing vein I'll do away with myself or something.

* * *

To my notion there were two great columnists—Eugene Field and Bert Leston Taylor. The nearest runner-up is Franklin P. Adams. Nothing the rest have done has not been done by Field and Taylor. We merely flounder about trails they blazed.

* * *

As average humans, columnists rate just as high as the next fellow, but no higher. I know only two columnists who interest me conversationally or in their writing. And I know of none I interest in either capacity. I find them unfailingly dull company.

* * *

With all the signed columns broadcast to the world with intimate details of our shirts, ties and familiarities with the great, no living columnist is as well known among thinking people as Frank Ward O'Malley, who was just a reporter on the old Sun, never signed a story or wrote a word about himself in his newspaper days.

* * *

I enjoy columns of others chiefly because I belong to the guild. But I am as conscious of their deficiencies—I speak solely of New York—as I am my own. The theme of every column is a personal exploitation, and asinine supplication for the reader to remark: "What a devil of a fellow!"

* * *

There is one glorious high spot in columning no other job I know attains. A fellow can devote the entire working hours of the day feeling sorry for himself—and be paid for it. For instance!

H. G. Wells Writes

ON "THE SCIENCE OF LIFE"

IN OUR bones there is a fine internal architecture of struts and stays beautifully adapted for resisting, with the greatest economy of material, the mechanical strains to which the bone is subjected. In its construction the head of the thigh-bone is like certain cranes; the inner architecture of the heel-bone is not unlike that of a roof, with lines of bone transmitting the pressure from leg to ground, and others at right angles as tie-beams.

All this delicacy of adaptation is called into existence by the actual stresses and strains to which the bone is exposed. If the mechanical conditions alter, the struts rebuild themselves in responsive adaptation. This is seen, for instance, when a broken bone is set crooked, or when two bones which ought to be free to move become united to each other, as in an anky-loozed stiff knee.

Again there exists people born with deformed feet which can never be used for walking. They cannot begin to walk and so the normal stimulations are withheld. The bony structure of their heel-bone remains poorly developed, and what there is of it is more like an ape's than a man's.

Indeed, the whole size and shape of bones is plastic. If a puppy be prevented from using one of its legs, by tying it in a sling, after six months the bones of the unused limb will be only about half the thickness of those which have had to carry weight, as well as being a little shorter.

And when an irregular fragment of bone from some other part of the body is grafted to take the place of a damaged or diseased finger joint, the mechanical forces in the finger will remodel it toward the shape of a finger joint within a year or two.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

People

THE HARDEST job you have to tackle is—PEOPLE.

You spend more time on that job and you use up more energy than on any other.

Elsie Robinson

People! They get your goat—they gum up your program, you're always getting mad at them or sorry for them or bored with them. You labor furiously to understand them or—what seems much more important!—to make them understand you. But they don't and it exasperates you. Why are they so stupid, so ornery? Why do they meddle and make unreasonable demands and graft and gabble?

If they'd only work with you, or leave you alone in peace, then you could really get somewhere. But they won't. They're always interfering. And, to tell the truth, you can't seem to leave them alone either. The more they bother you, the more you want to change them or, at least, get even with them. The thought of them becomes a habit—an obsession—

Then your mood will change. You'll get disgusted with yourself. You shouldn't be like that. You ought to like people—lots of people. You should be able to get along with anyone. Particularly with your own family. It's unnatural to be so bored and peevish. You'll stop it. You'll make yourself remember that every person is your fellow man. You'll love everyone! You'll be helpful to everyone! And then, of course, everyone will love you and understand you and do what you want.

But, worse luck, it doesn't turn out that way. After a brief period of sweetness and light, you're back in the same old sog. Still fumbling around, fumbling and fretting, trying to like and be liked by everyone.

Stop it! You can't do it and it isn't necessary that you should. You need only a few friends at most. As for the rest, stop fussing about them. And stop letting them fuss you. They are what they are—let them be. God didn't appoint you as deputy to check up on the whole human race. And you'll only get a pain in the neck if you try to do so. Let people be themselves—however far they may be from your fancy. Treat them as you do your other neighbors—the trees, the birds and the clouds. Amiably, tolerantly, with courteous indifference.

There is nothing unnatural in such indifference. You're not queer because you can't like most people. And they are not criminal if they can't like you. That's your right—and theirs. Then why all the bellyakin?

"Live and let live"—that's the oldest of maxims. But there isn't one mortal in a million that has the sense to do it. What a grand business life would be if we could!

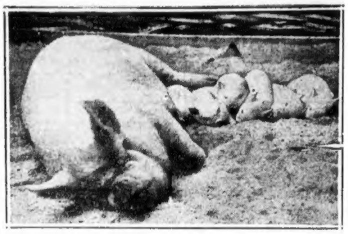
Animal Family Life

It Has Its Little Troubles



DOLCE FAR NIENTE, OR "SWEET REPOSE."

We do not believe in evolution, or any Darwin theory, but we are deeply interested in animals, their lives, doings, joys and sorrows.

Other men buy big guns and go to the tropics or to the north to shoot animals, much delighted when some creature bigger than themselves, and defenseless against bullets, rolls over dead.

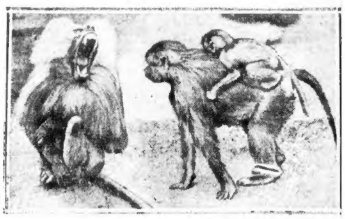
When he shot the tiger he was safe in the air on an elephant's back. When the tiger is safely dead it is photographed with "proud man" standing with one foot on top of it.



PAPA SCOLDS.

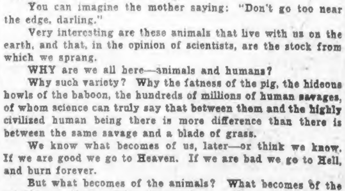
The pig mother, like all others, loves her children until she gets a new batch and forgets them. Only the human mother is devoted to her children through life.

Pigs are naturally CLEAN animals. The idea of filth that we associate with them and with pigsties is due to man, who shuts the unfortunate pig in a small sty, compelling it to live in muck and filth.

The two pictures of the monkey family will interest those that believe in evolution and those that don't.

It must be admitted that the upper picture, the father monkey "yelling his head off" because something doesn't please him, is much like many human fathers that yap and yell first, and think afterward.

The picture of the monkey father, calmed down, and of the mother, exercising her authority and restraining her imprudent child, is one of domestic felicity.



MATERNAL DISCIPLINE

Very interesting are these animals that live with us on the earth, and that, in the opinion of scientists, are the stock from which we sprang.

WHY are we all here—animals and humans?

Why such variety? Why the fatness of the pig, the hideous howls of the baboon, the hundreds of millions of human savages, of whom science can truly say that between them and the highly civilized human being there is more difference than there is between the same savage and a blade of grass.

We know what becomes of us, later—or think we know. If we are good we go to Heaven. If we are bad we go to Hell, and burn forever.

But what becomes of the animals? What becomes of the intelligence that enables the monkey mother to protect her infant, the fat pig to love her young ones? As we understand it, there is no Heaven for animals. We do not share the red Indian's hope that in Heaven he will find plenty of buffalo and bear, and will enjoy shooting them.

But if the animals have no Heaven, they have, on the other hand, no Hell, which makes it about even. They are safe, at least, once they die.
